Action Asked By Roosevelt On Steel Bid Accusations

Order to Justice Bureau Held Virtual Call for U. S. Prosecuton.

Four Firms Named After Investigation

FTC Charge May Inspire Anti-Monopoly Plank for Democrats.

By William V. Nessly.

A virtual call for prosecution of four of the country's largest steel companies in connection with charges of collusive bidding on Government contracts has been sent to the Justice Department by President Roosevelt, it was announced last night.

The President's action was taken in forwarding to the Attorney General a report by the Federal Trade Commission which held there was "reasonable ground to believe that the antitrust laws have been violated" in connection with identical bids submitted for supplying steel for PWA projects.

The President said in his letter to Attorney General Homer S. Cummings:

"You will note that the Federal Trade Commission definitely finds the existence of collusion. In accordance with their recommendation, I am referring the whole matter to you for appropriate action."

Out of the commission's investigation and recommendations there is also likely to develop a Presidential recommendation that Congress make "existing unfair practices" unlawful. In addition it was indicated there will be conducted a widespread collection of evidence of collusion in other commodities sold to the Federal Government. Furthermore, the case may have an effect in framing of an antimonopoly plank in the Democratic Party's platform, it was indicated by Attorney General Cummings in Philadelphia last night.

Firms Named.

The steel companies named in the commission report are the United States Steel Corporation, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation and the Inland Steel Co.

The case grew out of submission of bids last August and September on steel pilings for the Tri-Borough bridge at New York, a deep sea harbor project at Miami, Fla., and an ocean terminal at Morehead City, N. C.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, as PWA administrator, at that time denounced the indentical bids from the four companies, and he has frequently repeated his bitter criticism on other proposals which he declared not to be competitive.

In the case of the steel bids he granted the contract to the company whose plant was farthest removed from the project involved in order to give additional business to the railroads, a practice he has followed in other identical bid cases.

Into the controversy aroused by Ickes there later developed a new one over the importation of German steel for the projects financed by PWA. The idea of using foreign steel, cement and other products on construction projects designed to alleviate unemployment in this country was bitterly denounced by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and others.

Ordered Inquiry.

President Roosevelt then directed the Federal Trade Commission to make an investigation of the reported collusive bidding, and to determine also whether there had been "dumping" of German steel piling in this country at prices less than those charged purchasers in Germany.

The commission's report, made public yesterday, said the investigation had shown that production of steel sheet piling is concentrated in the hands of the four concerns named, and said that the four had admitted quoting identical delivered prices "because they were acting pursuant to a resolution of the industry continuing in effect the provisions of its former code with regard to the basing point system of delivered prices and related practices."

In its findings, the commission recommended that the President

5,000 Hear Religious Music As Kiwanis Opens Convention

Many Wives, Children on Hand for Twentieth Annual International Session; Meetings to Get Under Way Today.

All day long yesterday, by special train and automobile, Kiwanians arrived in Washington for the opening last night of the twentieth annual international Kiwanis convention. Most of the service club members, coming from all sections of the United States and Canada, brought their wives with them so that by last night there were 5,000 persons here for the four-day meeting.

Every available seat was taken at the outdoor theater as a crowd of well over 3,000 thronged to the first feature of the convention program. The Rev. Dr. Bernard C. Clausen, pastor of First Baptist Church, Pittsburgh, spoke.

Dr. Clausen deplored a tendency toward disdainful "belittling" which he said he saw in people today. "We are caught in a strange tailspin of morale," he said, "and are doomed to chaos unless rescued by a spiritual miracle."

The loss of morale, he said, was most plainly illustrated by comparing the self-sacrificing attitude of

Arabs Ambush British Troops; 12 Die in Battle

Planes and Reinforcements Help Disperse Band in Palestine.

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, June 21.—Two British soldiers and 10 Arabs were killed this afternoon in a battle near Tulkarem when the soldiers were ambushed by an Arab band.

(The Palcor Agency reported from Jerusalem that between 20 and 40 Arabs were slain in addition to the soldiers.)

One of the British dead was Sergt. Henry Sills, the other a private.

A British convoy of troops was rolling along the Haifa-Tel Aviv road at Anabta with a fleet of trucks when the Arab attack occurred.

Sills fell early in the fighting and a number of Arabs dragged his body with them into a cave. The British bombed the cave and the Arabs sought shelter elsewhere.

British planes and reinforcements of troops were called into action from Tulkarem. Until they arrived the Arabs were holding their own in the fighting.

Three of the planes were nicked by Arab bullets.

The battle began at 11 a. m. and lasted until dusk when the raiders retired to the hills.

Three battalions of troops and four planes took part in the encounter, the most serious since rebellion flared in Palestine.

Veterans Fight French Police In Blum Protest

Guards Help Block Parade of De La Rocque Group After Brief Clash.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 21.—Several thousand members of the Rightist War veterans' organization Croix de Feu fought police and mobile guards today who attempted to prevent them from parading.

The veterans had been ordered to demonstrate in a protest against the Leftist government of Premier Leon Blum by their chief, Col. Francois De La Rocque.

Rightists formed a line of march at the arch of triumph and started toward the place De La Concorde, crying "long live De La Rocque."

They refused to heed a police warning to dispense and truckloads of mobile guards were rushed to reinforce police. Hand-to-hand fighting lasted nearly half an hour.

Although none was reported seriously injured a score of arrests were made.

De La Rocque and other Nationalist leaders called upon their followers to unfurl the tricolor of France in a symbolic protest against "revolution and the attempted dictatorship by the minority."

Hundreds were flown from balconies, windows and taxicabs of Paris. There were similar displays

Mother Takes 3 Sons on Picnic, Binds, Kills Them, Shoots Self

By The United Press.

Madison, Me., June 21.—Mrs. Annie E. Jones, 33, took her three youngest children on a picnic today, blindfolded and bound them together, then shot and killed them and then took her own life.

The victims were Robert and Edward, 4, twins, and a 2-year-old son whose name was not immediately available.

Police said the triple murder-suicide occurred in an open field less than a half mile behind the Jones homestead.

The children were shot through the head with a 25-caliber rifle fired at close range. Their mother died of a bullet wound through the right side of the jaw, the slug entering the head.

Bodies, lying four feet apart, were found by Mrs. Jones' eldest child, Shirley.

Medical Examiner William S. Stinchfield, who viewed the bodies, said there was indication the shootings were premeditated. He said he understood Mrs. Jones had told a neighbor she planned to shoot herself and the three children.

In all, the temporarily deranged mother fired four shots, three at the children and one which ended her own life.

Dr. Stinchfield said the children were fired upon from a distance of 4 to 6 feet.

As he reconstructed the crime, the mother and three children left their home shortly after noon with a basket lunch. In the basket, he said, were cookies and sandwiches and, presumably, clothes-line rope and a towel.

Scarcely half a mile to the rear of her home, Mrs. Jones tied together the hands of the twins, bound them and their baby brother together at the waist and wrapped the towel around their heads, then fired three shots into their heads.

How or where she obtained the rifle could not be ascertained immediately, nor was it possible to determine whether she brought it with her when the four started out or returned for it after binding and blindfolding the children.

Dr. Stinchfield said there was no evidence the children had struggled to free themselves from their bonds. He said Mrs. Jones had become despondent because of poor health.

Japan Sends 3,000 Troops Into Peiping

Heavily Armed Force Joins Garrison in Chinese City.

Foreign Residents Are Alarmed; Tokyo Ship Fired On.

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, China, June 21.—Foreign residents of Peiping were startled today when 3,000 Japanese troops with full war equipment suddenly entered the city and paraded through the legation quarter, past the American and foreign embassies.

The appearance of the Japanese resulted in the wildest speculation among Chinese. Many believed the Japanese were taking over Peiping.

Not since the boxer rebellion in 1900 have so many foreign soldiers entered the ancient former capital of China.

Japanese sentries, with bayonets drawn, faced residents on the streets lined with curious to prevent the possible throwing of bombs at the troops.

Japanese officers declined to explain the unprecedented influx of troops but it was learned elsewhere the soldiers were from nearby Tungchow and Fengtai and are joining the Peiping garrison.

(Japan has brought thousands of additional troops into North China recently. The Chinese National government at Nanking has protested but without result.)

Japanese Ship Fired On.

Tientsin, China, June 21 (AP).—Japanese reports tonight said a Chinese customs cruiser equipped with machine guns fired on a Japanese vessel off Tangku, wounding two of the crew and damaging the vessel.

The target vessel was towed to Tangku, where the Japanese are investigating, the reports added.

Japanese said the firing was illegal and predicted the incident would lead to complications.

(Large scale smuggling into North China has increased the tension between China and Japan. The Chinese government, losing millions of dollars in revenue, has twice protested the smuggling, charging it is done with the support of the Japanese government. Tokyo, however, disclaimed responsibility.)

Student sentiment against Japan flared up again in Shanghai. Chinese government troops forcibly ended a demonstration in the railroad station by youths demanding free passage to Nanking, where they planned to demand that the government declare war on Japan.

Train Service Suspended.

Barbed wire barricades had been thrown around the station and train service was suspended.

The situation in the south, where the Canton (southwestern) regime had made gestures toward a civil war against the Nanking central government, appeared to be improving.

The Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported, however, that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, Nanking strong man, sent an ultimatum to military leaders of Kwangsi Province threatening war if they did not withdraw troops from southern Hunan Province, attached to Nanking.

Troops of Kwangtung Province, which with Kwangsi composes the Canton government, have already withdrawn from Hunan.

4 From City Hurt In Maryland Crash

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., June 21.—A three-car collision on the Defense highway tonight injured seven persons and tied up a line of homeward-bound holiday motorists for more than half an hour.

Peter J. Rosch, of 322 Douglas street northeast, Washington, suffered lacerations of the face and arms. Two of the passengers in his car, Matthew Rosch and Miss Lorraine Rosch, also suffered brush burns. A third passenger, Frank Ippolito, of 1801 Otis street northeast, was bruised on the chest and legs.

Charity Truddles, of Annapolis, was admitted to a hospital here for treatment for lacerations of the leg and possible fracture of the leg. She was a passenger in a car driven by Aaron Truddles, also of Annapolis, who was unhurt.

The third car was operated by Olive C. Washington, of 709 Thirteenth street northeast, Washington. She suffered brush burns of the leg and arms. Myrtle Anne Crum, of 617 L street northeast, Washington, a passenger in the Washington car, suffered contusions of the head.

State Policeman John C. Gates summoned all the drivers to appear before Magistrate Luther Nichols at Camp Parole for a hearing.

85 Persons Hurt As Ship Hits Rock

By the Associated Press.

Gerona, Spain, June 21.—Eighty-five persons were injured, five seriously, when the French steamer El Kantara, with 400 passengers aboard, strayed too close to the shore during a fog today and piled up on a rocky ledge.

Although traveling at a moderate rate of speed, the 5,079-ton vessel was driven so far onto the rocks that her prow was clear of water.

The El Kantara was returning to Port Vendres from Oran, Algeria. Most of those injured were French businessmen.

Those more seriously injured were removed to hospitals ashore and others were given first-aid treatment and discharged.

Smith Bloc Rebels at Roosevelt, Threatens to Support Landon; Farmers Fight 'Sketchy' Plank

Western Democrats Will Demand Party Draft 'Practical' Plans.

Strong Monopoly Views Considered

Revival of 1932 Bid for the 'Forgotten Man' Is Expected.

By Robert C. Albright,
A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, June 21.—Dissatisfaction of Western Democrats with tentative drafts of the New Deal's 1936 farm plank tonight wrote trouble on the wall of the Democratic National Convention hall two days in advance of the first meeting of the Democratic resolutions committee.

Mid-Western delegates arriving in Philadelphia denounced semi-official preliminary drafts of the plank being circulated here as little more than a "pious wish" for farm prosperity. They will oppose a brief farm plank and demand something more than sketchy treatment of the subject. What they want is practical proposals, in black and white, on how to meet the farm problem.

The farm plank appeared to be worrying platform draftsmen most, due to the new Union Party's strong appeal to the farmers, and the same consideration is likely to exert a powerful influence on the convention's money stand. Leaders were keeping a weather eye peeled toward the Republican platform, however, in discussing their monopoly, foreign and "constitutional" planks, and seemed bent on refreshing the party's recollection on the "forgotten man."

Moderate Concessions.

Early money plank drafts are a far cry from the Republican platform and Gov. Alf Landon's supplementary declaration for eventual return to a currency convertible into gold, but makes only moderate concessions to the Union Party's inflationary views.

They strike something like a middle course between the two, by pledging continuance of "sound currency" with steady purchasing power, but take an emphatic stand against return to the old free gold standard as an invitation to further fluctuation and monetary troubles. Some of them contain a pledge of "justice," between debtor and creditor, and between those who make future commitments in dollar terms.

Original farm platform proposals, understood to have been circulated among party chieftains for criticism, provoked plenty of criticism, among Western farm delegates today.

Soil Development.

Briefly, they propose as follows:

1. Development of soil fertility.
2. Enrichment of agricultural rural life, through rural electrification, and other domestic modern conveniences.
3. Increasing the market for farm products by re-employment at good wages in industry.
4. Indorsement of the co-operative movement, as an aid to the economic position of agriculture.
5. Extension of adequate credit to the farmers to combat farm tenancy.

Prevailing sentiment appears to be against a flat declaration in favor of production control, but words yet may be found to mean the same thing.

Brevity Is Urged.

Proponents of the plank as outlined use brevity as a main argument and contend any specific setting forth of a "modus operandi" would require too many words. The same considerations that sold a short platform to the Cleveland Republican Convention are at work here. One hears the same contentions that a concise, snappy platform is the only one that will put the Democratic message over to the masses.

Government Clerk Drowns in Potomac

Ralph Glassman, 25, an employe in the pension division of the Veteran's Bureau, drowned yesterday afternoon as, with a party of friends, he was enjoying the first day of summer swimming in the Potomac River.

Glassman, who lived at 1719 Q street northwest, dived from a row boat near the Three Sister Islands just west of Georgetown.

About 10 feet from the boat, he said, according to his friends:

"I can't swim."

He sank in the water. The river at that point is more than 60 feet deep, harbor police reported. They spent several hours dragging for the body.

With Glassman were Leo Reuben who lived in the same address; Anna B. Rosenblum, 917 Eighteenth street northwest, and Ruth Markowitz, 1739 I street northwest.

At the time of the accident Reuben, who is a good swimmer, was in the water. He tried to locate his companion's body.

Glassman came here recently from New York. His friends said he had planned to return yesterday to attend the wedding of a relative. At the last minute, however, he decided not to make the trip.

Text of Statement Asking Conservatives to Take Walk

Following is the statement issued to delegates to the Democratic convention by Alfred E. Smith, Bainbridge Colby, James A. Reed, Joseph B. Ely and David F. Cohalan.

To the delegates to the National Democratic Convention of 1936:

As men who believe in the principles, teachings and traditions of the Democratic Party as they were personified by Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson and Grover Cleveland, we urge you, who meet in the name of the party made glorious in the minds of patriotic Americans by the records of those men, to emulate their examples and do in the present grave crisis, confronting our country, what those great leaders would have done under such conditions.

We suggest to you, as all of these men were conspicuous for courage and character, that they would subordinate partisanship to patriotism; look with an eye single to the welfare of the country and its citizens; act in the manner best calculated to preserve the institutions under which we became the first nation of the world and gave to our citizens a measure of comfort and a standard of living wages incomparably higher than those enjoyed in any other land.

We submit therefore that—if you are to continue to act under the name of the Democracic Party—you must first, be American rather than anything else; you must take the heavy hand of Government off business, to the end that the 10 or 12 millions of unemployed may again join the ranks of workers employed in the factories, industries and on the farms of the country; you must put in power men under American policies of government who will balance our budget and put an end to the series of deficits measured in billions, which the present Administration has given to us; you must have a government which will make and enforce laws that will keep the American markets for the American industries and farms and not have them swamped by the goods and products of nations that are our industrial and farming rivals and competitors. In chasing the shadow of foreign markets we must not throw away the substance of the greatest market in the world—the domestic market of the United States of America. You must put an end to the orgy of spending our public funds and the creating of millions of additional taxeaters who are breaking the backs of the honest majority of Convention Is Requested To Nominate 'Genuine' Democrat.

Delegates Urged To Drop President

Colby, Reed and Ely Sign Message; Lemke's Race Causes Concern.

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, June 21.—In a message to delegates to the Democratic National Convention opening here Tuesday, right-wing insurgent Democrats, headed by Alfred E. Smith, demanded today that President Roosevelt be "put aside" and that "some genuine Democrat" be substituted as the party's standard bearer.

Unless this is done, Smith and his associates told the convention, the voters must turn to the Republican Party "to preserve the America of the great leaders of the past."

Besides Smith, the signers were Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State during part of the Wilson Administration; James A. Reed, former Senator from Missouri; Joseph B. Ely, former Governor of Massachusetts, and Daniel F. Cohalan, former justice of the New York State Supreme Court and an active Tammany leader.

While this group had made it generally known that it intended to "take a walk" from the convention, the message was the first indication that form Democratic leaders intended actively to join the campaign to defeat Roosevelt.

Crossfire by Foes.

Even before the convention opens, the Democratic Party thus finds itself subject of attack from the right and from the left. The third party movement, composed of Townsend, Coughlin and farm inflationist groups, is designed to coax away from the Roosevelt banner the more liberal elements of the New Deal support. The few delegates who have arrived for the convention were reticent in discussing the situation. James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, merely stated that "of course the convention will nominate a genuine Democrat."

Later Farley issued this statement:

"No one is surprised by the report that certain people prominent in organizations like the Liberty League will send telegrams to the convention or issue statements—the objectives and connections of people of this kind are by this time thoroughly well known to every American."

While party leaders were doing no talking, they obviously were concerned by the turn of events which puts the Administration under a crossfire from the conservatives on the one side and the ultra-liberals on the other. The conservative attack caused less apprehension than that of the liberals.

There was much speculation as to the possibilities involved in the candidacy of Representative William Lemke, North Dakota, for President on the Union ticket. If this candidacy should develop into a real one, the outcome, it was generally admitted, could not help being beneficial to the Republicans. The Democrats have counted on carrying the Liberal Northwestern States, but it was conceded that in some places Lemke might attract sufficient votes to turn the balance to the Republicans. Some Democratic leaders expressed themselves as mystified by Lemke's announcement, contending that the worst thing that could happen to the Liberals would be election of a Republican.

May Affect Platform.

How much influence the message of the Smith group would have no one was prepared to say. Some expressed the opinion that it would appeal only to those who already have made up their minds not to cast their ballots for Roosevelt. The message obviously will have no effect on the nomination. No active opposition to Roosevelt is expected in the convention. However, the Smith stand and the Lemke movement may have considerable bearing on the drafting of the platform.

The platform writers will have a difficult time undertaking to reconcile the two extremely divergent points of view of the right-wingers and the left-wingers. On the Majority Rule Fight Is Begun In Philadelphia

Cummings Opens Battle; Byrd Leading South in Opposition.

Philadelphia, June 21.—The fight to repeal the Democratic Party's century-old two-thirds nominating rule began here in earnest tonight, with a statement by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings that "this is our golden opportunity to get rid of this incubus."

Cummings sounded a note that had previously been struck by Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, chairman of the Democratic rules committee, which plans to carry the fight to the convention.

Whereas the Republican Party requires only a simple majority of delegates to nominate its Presidential candidates, the Democratic Party, since its first convention, has required a two-thirds nominating vote. Many have been the fights to repeal it, but the "solid South," jealous of its power to veto a majority choice, has successfully kept it in force.

With President Roosevelt without opposition this year for the nomination, Senator Clark, Postmaster General James A. Farley, Attorney General Cummings and others think this is the time to abrogate the rule that often has held the convention in session many days overtime, and frequently sidetracked the majority's choice for the candidate.

"It isn't a two-thirds rule anyway," Attorney General Cummings said tonight. "It is a one-third rule—a rule by which one-third of the convention can block the wishes of the majority.

"In fact, no one wishes it to be retained, except the Republicans."

Cummings, however, was not counting on the certain opposition

Liberal Union Of Wisconsin Spurns Lemke

Parley Tables Resolution Calling for Support of 3d Candidate.

By the Associated Press.

Oshkosh, Wis., June 21.—Wisconsin's Farmer-Labor Progressive Federation, six-month-old coalition of the State's Progressive and Socialist parties, turned thumbs down today on the new Union Party and its Presidential candidate, Congressman William Lemke, North Dakota Republican.

A resolution calling for support of the new national political body was tabled on the floor of the federation convention after a long debate in which the Union Party was described alternately as "an opening wedge so we can win a national victory in 1940" and a "potpourri of political clap trap."

Tabling of the resolution—which advocated support of the new party on the ground that its aims came closer to the federation's than those of any other party—was recommended by the resolutoins committee. The recommendation was approved unanimously.

The convention decided, after a bitter argument, to leave the position of Governor blank on its State slate. This was considered a victory for the Progressive Governor, Phillip La Follette, who was not eligible for indorsement because he has not joined the federation.

Walter Graunke, of Wausau, led the fight for support of Lemke. He said details of the new party were still unknown, but that Wisconsin liberals should support any movement leading to a national third party.

"We have nobody to vote for," Graunke declared. "This would give us an entering wedge so we can win in 1940. All the Republicans

Philadelphia Shines City Keys (And Prices, Too) for Democrats

By Sidney Olson.
A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, June 21.—The City of Brotherly Love dusted off all available unused keys to the city today and prepared to present them to arriving Democratic delegates at the slight fee of $1 per copy.

Thus happily mixing commerce with civic duty, Philadelphia somewhat nervously awaited the morrow, when the full force of the onrushing horde of Democrats will be felt.

This ancient Republican stronghold, which traditionally has placed Democrats very low indeed in the social scale, now is anxious to welcome them. It is eager to make them feel at home (room and bath, $12 per day), to wine and dine them (Scotch highball, 75 cents; ham and eggs, $1.50) and to entertain them (no cover charge until after 7 p. m.).

The citizenry decided to forego Sunday drives in the country today and assembled en masse around the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, convention headquarters, to stare at delegates whisking up in cabs.

Here it was estimated the citizens welcomed Democratic Chief James A. Farley no less than 100 times by nightfall and they were apparently prepared to keep this up indefinitely.

For some reason these citizens have no clear picture of the genial disburser of postmasterships, and thus you can hear some one in the crowd say, as each cab drives up:

"Hey, that's Farley there!"

Someone else will say: "No, that's him in the next cab."

But two doors north of the Bellevue-Stratford is the Union League Club, focal point of ironclad conservatism. Somewhat cynical gentlemen will tell you three things about this club—one, that the members voted in a body for Ulysses S. Grant for President; two, that the club still looks on the Gettysburg Address as a somewhat radical doc-

Landon Favors Union Party's Fight, Aid Says

Kansan Reported Believing 3d Candidate Will Help in Informing Voters.

By the United Press.

Topeka, Kans., June 21.—Gov. Alfred M. Landon, of Kansas favors formation of the Union Party and the Presidential candidacy of Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, insofar as they help bring campaign issues to the people, the United Press learned tonight.

A spokesman for the Republican Presidential nominee said:

"Gov. Landon welcomes all sincere persons and all sincere parties to the great public debate which will be concluded at the ballot box this year. He always has felt and said in America all groups are and should be free to express and present their views. Landon is confident that the more clearly and vigorously all conflicting views are carried to the people the sounder their ultimate decision should be."

Introduced Thomas.

Observers recalled that Gov. Landon introduced Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, to a Topeka audience in 1934 and quoted Voltaire's assertion to an adversary:

"I do not agree with one thing you say, but will fight to the death to maintain your right to say it."

Frederick D. Enfield, Los Angeles attorney, arrived in Topeka today to join Landon's staff. Enfield, registered Democrat, graduated from the Nebraska Law School, acted as secretary to former Representative Frank Reavis, of Nebraska, worked on newspapers in Omaha, Lincoln and Washington and was special assistant in the Department of Justice to three attorneys-general.

For the past eight years, Enfield has lived in California, managing real estate properties for a bank. Enfield voted for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932, but abandoned the New Deal two years ago.

"Mr. Roosevelt has failed lamentably to attain the objectives which he glowingly set forth and which led many to follow him," Enfield said. "I like Gov. Landon's record and for what he stands, and I have every confidence that he will carry out exactly what he promises. That is why I am here."

Gov. and Mrs. Landon today attended the First Methodist Church of Topeka. They arrived during the musical prelude and unobtrusively slipped into a rear pew. After services, they chatted with members of the congregation.

Challenge G. O. P.

By the United Press.

The National Council for the Prevention of War last night challenged the Republican Party to submit a "consistent program" for peace.

"There is general alarm throughout the peace movement as to the line of thought that seems to be animating the policies of your party," Frederick J. Libby, director of the council, wrote Gov. Alf M. Landon, G. O. P. candidate for President.

Libby asked Landon to "fill in some important gaps" in the Republican foreign policy platform plank, which he charged "reveals no indication that the party has given any serious thought to the problem of peace, let alone worked out a consistent program for achieving it."

Libby's letter was written at direction of the council's executive board. Specifically, it asked Landon if he favored embargoes against shipment of war materials to belligerents; legislation to tax the profits of war; how he proposes to determine what "adequate defense" means; if he believes current military expenditures are excessive; if he has any plan for "easing the tensions in the Pacific which threaten war," and if the party's stand on the World Court "means that it would refuse to co-operate" in organized effort to settle disputes by peaceful means.

Pageant Will Feature Henry Bi-Centennial

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Ashland, Va., June 22.—Upward of 100 carpenters and laborers started work this morning upon the amphitheater at Hanover Courthouse, where the Patrick Henry Bi-Centennial outdoor spectacle, "Liberty or Death," will be staged July 15, 16 and 17.

There is a perfect natural sightline from every part of the stadium, so that every spectator will have a full view of the giant triple-stage, which is being built for the production in which upwards of 1,000 persons will participate.

James Bell, star of "Tobacco Road," will portray the role of Patrick Henry in "Liberty or Death," the script for which is by Beverley T. Campbell, Richmond playright and student of Virginia history.

Col. Knox Departs For Summer Home

Chicago, June 21 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, left today for his summer home in Manchester, N. H., where he will vacation for two weeks.

Accompanied by his secretary, John F. O'Keefe, the colonel said he would detrain at Worcester, Mass., where he will be met by Mrs. Knox. They will travel to Manchester by automobile.

Aboard the same train and bound for New York was G. B. Goodspeed, newly appointed treasurer of the Republican National Committee. Goodspeed said he would attend a banquet of the Republican National Finance Committee in New York.

H. M. S. York to Visit Norfolk for Week

Norfolk, Va., June 21 (AP).—H. M. S. York, cruiser of the Royal British Navy, is scheduled to steam into Hampton Roads early tomorrow and proceed to the Lamberts Point terminals, where she will berth. She will remain in port one week.

The York is commanded by Capt. H. O. Boxer, R. N., and has a crew of about 600, including seven midshipmen.

The ship will be met at the grain elevator by a delegation of citizens representing the city and various civic organizations.

Al Smith and Associates Dampen New Deal Ardor at Convention.

By Franklyn Waltman

PHILADELPHIA, June 21.—Just as the arriving delegates to the Democratic National Convention today were letting off the first steam of their enthusiasm and without a cloud in the sky — so they thought—Al Smith sneaked up behind them and pelted them with a big, wet towel.

WALTMAN.

The statement signed by former Gov. Smith and several other outstanding Democrats urging "the putting aside of Franklin D. Roosevelt and the substitution of some genuine Democrat," had the effect of a wet towel on the convention preparations. It obviously dampened joyous New Deal spirits. Otherwise it will be ineffective so far as this convention goes.

But while the Smith-Colby-Reed-Ely-Cohalan statement will not cause any change to be made in the plans for this convention, it is an ominous note in the coming Presidential campaign. It indicated clearly that the Smiths, Colbys, Elys and Reeds within the Democratic Party will do more than "take a walk" or go fishing this year. This statement means that these Democrats will give aid and encouragement, covertly and openly, to the Landon-Knox ticket.

Indeed, they leave no doubt that they will openly urge their followers to espouse the Republican cause. In their statement Messrs. Smith, Colby, Ely and Reed clearly make known their intentions when they assert that if the convention fails to turn back to the party's traditional principles and fails to re-enter the home of Thomas Jefferson "then patriotic voters of all parties will know unhesitatingly to what standard they must rally in order to preserve the America of the great leaders of the past."

That goes further than Al Smith went in his American Liberty League dinner speech. On that occasion he said that unless the party returned to its Jeffersonian moorings, Democrats of his faith could either don the mantle of hypocrisy or "take a walk." Taking a walk means withdrawal from all active participation in the campaign. Prior to the Smith speech the term for that course of action was "going fishing."

The one-time Happy Warrior now indicates that he has no intention of leaving the line of battle and withdrawing to the quiet of the eightieth floor of the Empire State Building. He is not going "to take a walk" in the sense that term is used. He is going to bolt the Democratic Party and urge his admirers and those Democrats of a like mind to follow him.

Al Smith is going to do this because, as he said, "patriotic voters of all parties will know unhesitatingly to what standard they must rally" if the Democratic Convention fails to reform the New Deal.

Having attached his name solemnly to such words, it would be craven for Al Smith not to carry through once the Democrats failed to meet the alternative set out for them—and whatever may be said about Al Smith, Joseph B. Ely, Bainbridge Colby and James A. Reed, it cannot be said that any one of them is craven or cowardly.

Moreover, Al Smith realizes the full significance of those words and undoubtedly has determined to make the break with the party which eight years ago gave him its standard to carry in a mighty war—but then neither Al Smith nor many other Democrats regard the Roosevelt New Deal aggregation as the true Democratic Party.

He must be ready to make the break because Al Smith is too experienced and wise a political hand not to know full well that the statement he and his colleagues addressed to the convention delegates will not swerve the latter from the renomination of President Roosevelt and the adoption of a platform dictated by the latter.

He may have thought that such a statement would cause the President to pause and modify somewhat the platform which he will submit for the adoption of this convention. But Al Smith also knows that every candidate makes his own plaform—just as he did in 1928 and as Gov. Alf M. Landon is doing now—and that President Roosevelt must stand on the record he has made.

Aside from the wet towel tossed by Al Smith into the gathering of Democratic cohorts here, there is little that is exciting. Everything is cut and dried and even the Smith-Colby-Reed-Ely lamentations have not inserted any note of uncertainty. Indeed there is every reason to believe that as a political event, this convention will be as dull as a Philadelphia Sunday.

It is obvious that the Democratic chieftains missed a trick in regard to this convention. With their flare for the unorthodox and the precedent-smashing, they should have arranged for a one-day convention this year. All the business which will be transacted here from Tuesday to Saturday easily could have been accomplished in one day without any crowding.

But then, of course, neither Philadelphia nor any other city would be interested in bidding for the convention and Jim Farley would have been out $200,000, the price paid by the City of Brotherly Love, for the honor of entertaining the Democrats.

Stretching the convention out for five days is a piece of boondoggling for Philadelphia and the Democratic Party. But it would have been smarter to have held a one-day session.

Here is the real dope about this convention, as the boys who reveal the inside would put it: Franklin D. Roosevelt will be nominated President; John N. Garner, will be nominated Vice President; a platform will be adopted which expresses Mr. Roosevelt's ideas; the two-thirds rule will be repealed; Mr. Roosevelt on Saturday night will accept the nomination. How do we know? We just got it from an important fellow on the inside.

Smith Bloc Threatens Bolt

other hand, the Smith group, while discussing at length the stand they believed the party should take, made it clear that President Roosevelt's nomination, in spite of any platform concessions, would be so objectionable as to make their active opposition necessary. With this in mind, it is likely that if preliminary drafts of the platform are changed at all they will be changed in the direction of appeasing the left-wing group.

The Smith message asked the delegates to emulate the examples of Jefferson, Jackson and Cleveland, "in this present grave crisis confronting the country." It asked that partisanship be subordinated to patriotism.

Funds Misuse Charged.

The delegates were asked, above all, "to put an end to the campaign to buy the Presidency by the misuse of funds." The writers of the message declared that relief money was contributed by the taxpayers "not as a bribe, but as a national necessity."

These things, the delegates were told, would necessarily involve the putting aside of Franklin D. Roosevelt and the substitution of some genuine Democrat, of whom you have so many on your list of delegates."

Smith is a delegate to the convention, but he has indicated that he will not come to Philadelphia. Farley suggested that "some smart fellow might invite Smith to come here and say it directly to the delegates." He said he would not issue such an invitation. Attorney General Cummings, who arrived late this afternoon, remarked that "after all, the Democratic Party is composed of delegates to the Democratic convention."

If, said the message, Roosevelt is discarded and the party stands for the thing asked by the insurgents, "American institutions will be safe" no matter which party wins.

Following this back-handed indorsement of Gov. Alf M. Landon and the Republican platform, the group continued:

"If you fail, then patriotic voters of all parties will know unhesitatingly to what standard they must rally in order to preserve the America of the great leaders of the past."

This statement was construed as a complete bolt to the Republican party, should the convention do what it is certain to do, renominate Roosevelt.

In closing, however, the group pledged itself to "remain faithful to Democratic ideals."

While it was apparent that the Lemke third party movement was giving the Democrats considerable concern, Farley said he saw no reason why plans should be rearranged because of it.

Meanwhile, preconvention crowds were slow in arriving. Only a few delegations were here tonight. One of the reasons for the lack of activity was the absence of most Democratic members of Congress, who, worn out by the preadjournment strain, were resting before coming to the convention.

Farley said there probably will be 20 seconding speeches when the name of President Roosevelt is placed in nomination Friday. He said one of the speeches will be made by Gov. Lehman of New York, who has announced he will not seek renomination. The New York Governor, before his withdrawal, was the subject of an attack by Cohalan, similar to that made today upon Roosevelt. The President and Lehman are close personal and political friends.

The Democratic Natonal Committee plans to meet tomorrow to consider delegate contests. The convention will open at noon Tuesday. This afternoon Farley talked to a group of Negro Democrats and then attended the ball game.

Comment Acrid On Bolt Threat Of Smith Bloc

Woman Leader Says 1928 Nominee Has Deserted Former Principles.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, June 21.—Delegates to the Democratic National Convention were bitter in their comment on the telegram sent to all convention delegates under the signatures of Alfred E. Smith, Bainbridge Colby, James A. Reed, Joseph B. Ely and Daniel F. Cohalan.

Miss Mary W. Dewson, chairman of the Democratic women's advisory committee, said Smith had abandoned all the social principles which caused her to lead the 1928 campaign for him among women in nine Midwestern States.

She blamed the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill for "wrecking" agriculture, for intensifying nationalism all over the world, and for destroying foreign markets for American farm products.

Says Red Cross Blundered.

"As for relief—we have done an amazingly good job in a practically new field," she said. "I worked for the Red Cross during the war, and I know it made blunders which, if made by the WPA, would be blazoned all over the country.

"We are not going back to selling apples, as the jobless did during the Hoover Administration, and we are not going back to breadlines."

Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, termed it "impertinent."

Bruce Campbell, chairman of the Illinois delegation, said he felt "Gov. Smith's letter will have no effect whatever on the convention."

Taggart Scornful.

Thomas Taggart, jr., Indiana leader, said "Gov. Smith's letter won't make a bit of difference to the convention."

Senator William G. McAdoo (Democrat), of California, said "Those gentlemen have been so long effaced as Democrats I think their suggestions will be ignored."

"Will it have any effect in California?" he was asked.

"It may increase the Roosevelt majority," he said.

Senator F. Ryan Duffy (Democrat), Wisconsin, said: "As far as Wisconsin Democrats are concerned, we're always glad to receive advice, but this is the case when we are not going to listen to it. The statement won't have any effect in my State. Wisconsin is as certain for Roosevelt as any State."

Predicts South Dakota Victory.

First Assistant Postmaster General William W. Howes said:

"I'm from a far State—South Dakota—and I say now that we'll give Roosevelt a victory in November regardless of what anyone says about it. After all, we know who has helped us."

Gov. Bibbs Graves, of Alabama, chairman of the Alabama delegation, said: "There is nothing new in this irrepressible egotism bobbing up again. When I was a kid there were kiddies who wouldn't play tag unless they were 'it.' * * * A little modesty would be very becoming in these ex-its."

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, said: "I don't think the convention will nominate any one of the five."

Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat), of Missouri: "It won't have the slightest effect. Those fellows have been off the reservation for years."

Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), of Alabama: "I don't see why anyone considers that news. I don't believe in trying to revive a ghost."

Collector of the Port Joseph A. Maynard, of Boston, said:

"The delegates to this convention will ignore this impudent demand and renominate the winning ticket of 1932."

Lemke

and Democrats give us are promises and smiles that mean nothing. Do we want to wait until the farmers and workers starve to death?"

Richard Eisenmann, of Superior, agreed that Lemke had tried to do something for the farmers, but he criticized the Townsend plan and said the Union Party was "to hastily put together."

Max Raskin, Milwaukee Socialist, called the Union Party a "potpourri of political claptrap" and predicted it would not appear on the ballot in more than one or two States. He said there was a Presidential candidate who stood for the same principles as the Wisconsin federation and that man was Norman Thomas. Many of the delegates cheered.

Samuel Sigman, of Appleton, said some Progressives were not ready to support Thomas, some liked Roosevelt and some were favorable to the Coughlin movement. He urged, as did other speakers, that the federation take no stand on national politics this year.

Belgian Strike Peace Reported to Be Near

Brussels, June 21 (AP).—A complete and early settlement of Belgium's widespread strikes was predicted by government officials today. Tension was greatly relaxed.

Only the question of a 40-hour week still is to be agreed upon as 31 arbitration committees reported negotiations have been successful.

A strike of dock workers at Antwerp was settled yesterday, but heavy troop precautions continued there and in Brussels, where some 20,000 have been on a walkout.

Chamber Votes To Study State Wage Controls

Directors Attack 'Waste,' Also Will Investigate Monetary Policy.

By the Associated Press.

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States decided yesterday to investigate the possible use of State compacts to attain "substantial uniformity" in regulating industry working conditions.

The directors, adopting a program for "the formulation and effectuation of national policies which may contribute to economic recovery and increased employment," also reiterated their opposition to "extravagance" in both Federal and local expenditures.

The program, which did not refer to the Supreme Court decisions voiding NRA, the Guffey Coal act, and the New York minimum wage law, called for "exploration of the possibilities of utilizing compacts among the States directly for control of utilization of natural resources and for dealing with conditions of work for employes in production, in order that in this regard there may be substantial uniformity among competing States."

Referring to the new Federal law to restrict price advantages to chain stores and to recent State legislation, the directors said these "may very well influence commerce and distribution in unexpected ways which will affect adversely both the public interest and the interest of private enterprise."

The directors decided to ask the opinion of the chamber's membership on such legislation.

Reminding that President Roosevelt's power to regulate the currency expires next January, the directors also decided to study monetary policy.

Other subjects set down for a future expression of opinion were: The present social security program; Government competition with private indutry; tariff rates on farm product; Merchant Marine legislation; reorganization of Federal administrative activities; State legislation for economy.

Rule Fight

of the South when he said that Southern delegates not only are certain to oppose abrogation of the rule, but may bid for the support of delegates from the West and Southwest.

Among those expected vigorously to oppose its repeal is Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, and he will not be alone. Byrd points out that if the two-thirds rule is abrogated, the unit rule must be also—otherwise a minority of the convention might place a candidate in nomination.

The Roosevelt leadership is in the saddle at this convention, however, and it seems determined to go through with the repealer. Personally strongly in favor of abrogation Chairman Farley, of the national committee, today told reporters he will insist on a free, fair fight, and that everyone who wants to be heard will be accorded an opportunity to speak.

"I am confident the rule will be voted out," Senator Clark reiterated today.

Senator Clark has reason to have a personal interest in the matter.

Clark's mind harks back to the 1912 Democratic convention when, as a youth of 22, he saw his father, former Speaker of the House, win a majority vote on eight ballots, but lose the nomination to President Wilson, when he could not command a two-thirds vote.

The rule, which has been in force ever since, was first adopted at the first Democratic National Convention in 1832, presumably for the purpose of showing the country the party was united behind the nominee—Martin Van Bureu, designated as the "heir apparent" of Jackson. It has caused trouble in Democratic ranks ever since. In fact it came back to plague Van Buren himself in 1844, after attaining a majority of the convention, he finally lost the nomination to James K. Polk.

It was said in an authoritative quarter tonight that President Roosevelt is vitally interested in abrogation of the two-thirds rule, and has asked that this word be passed on to Southern delegates who are opposing its repeal.

Among the delegates actively working for abrogation of the rule is Senator McAdoo, chairman of the California delegation, who believes it cost him the nomination in 1924.

Gulf Gale Hits Inland, But Causes No Damage

Brownsville, Tex., June 21 (U.P.).—A hurricane, which had been wandering over the Gulf of Mexico for two days, passed inland between here and Tampico, Mexico, at noon today, according to word received here.

The storm struck the Mexican coast at a barren, sparsely settled region and dissipated itself without doing damage, reports said.

Tampico had rain and high winds, but reported no damage.

Text of Statement Asking Conservatives to Take Walk

our country-men and women, who still toil and save as did their parents before them. You must do away with conditions under which 20,000,000 of Americans are on the dole, with nothing to hope for under present rulers except a continuance of that condition of semi-servility.

You must preserve the Constitution and under it the three separate, distinct and independent branches of Government. To that end you must have a President who will remain within his own sphere of jurisdiction and not make the Congress into a rubber stamp or try to intimidate the judiciary into an indorsement of his efforts to turn our Republic into a dictatorship on the European model or an Asiatic absolutism.

You must folllow the advice and example of the great Presidents of the past and keep our country free from entangling alliances with old world powers. You must insist upon a Chief Executive who will collect the monies due us from defaulting governments instead of encouraging by silence and otherwise a continuance of defaults.

You must, above all, put an end to the campaign, now under full swing, to buy the Presidency by the misuse of funds—generously given by the people of the United States to alleviate want and distress, largely caused by the incompetence of public servants—and if there is no other way to do this, you must—during the continuance of such help to otherwise helpless millions of Americans—save the honor of the country by preventing the dispensers of these public funds from coercing the voters, for whom the money has been appropriated, not as a bribe but as a National necessity.

Called Hard Tasks.

These are hard tasks even for men who are worthy of succession to the leadership of the Democratic Party. They would necessarily involve the putting aside of Franklin D. Roosevelt and the substitution of some genuine Democrat—of whom you will have so many on your list of delegates.

Is it too much to expect, with the many patriotic men and women among you, that the convention will have the courage and character to do these things? You will have to do them if you are to show yourselves fit to follow in the footsteps of Jefferson, Jackson and Cleveland.

The temptation to do otherwise may be great.

But if you do not act as those men would have acted, you should put aside the name of the party, which you will have deserted, and adopt a name which will properly reflect the principles of a regimented state, as advocated in the so-called New Deal legislation.

Hope For Best.

We hope for the best and call upon you to stand for Democratic principles so that the coming contest may be between two great American groups, which have honest differences of opinion, within the framework of the Constitution.

If you do, you will deserve success and honor—no matter what may be the outcome of the campaign, for in either case, American institutions will be safe.

If you fail, then patriotic voters of all parties will know unhesitatingly to what standard they must rally in order to preserve the America of the great leaders of the past.

We beg to subscribe ourselves as men who will remain faithful to Democratic ideals and traditions, as well as to our country.

Faithfully yours,

Hastings Lays Bribe Attempt To Democrats

Asserts Committee Makes Illegal Solicitation of Drive Funds.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 21.—Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, tonight accused the Democratic National Committee of illegally soliciting campaign contributions, and said the Roosevelt Administration was responsible for a campaign "as corrupt and unsavory, in many instances, as the record of a professional gangster."

"I have evidence in my possession," Hastings said in a coast-to-coast radio broadcast, "that the Democratic National Committee, under the direction of the Postmaster General of the United States, is engaged in a type of extortion tantamount to blackmail; that it has flagrantly disregarded the corrupt practices act, and that its employes have attempted to bribe corporation officials."

His charges, he said, referred to means employed by the Democratic National Committee in soliciting advertising for the "Book of the Democratic National Convention," from the sale of which, he indicated, the Democratic Party planned to take in "several million dollars."

Contributions are being sought from corporations as advertising rates, Hastings asserted, "to be expended by a political committee, without accounting, to advance the interest of its candidates for office." It is in violation, he said, of the corrupt practices act.

The Senator further accused committee agents of bringing undue pressure against corporation officials. He suggested that a bipartisan committee of Senators investigate his charges.

Bucharest Police Kill Street Rioters

Bucharest, Rumania, June 21 (AP). Police were reported to have killed several persons and wounded many today in street fighting attributed to rising feeling against Mme. Magda Lupescu, red-haired friend of King Carol, and against Jews.

For half an hour pistol shots reverberated through the downtown section while noncombatants scurried to cover.

The fight started as a newspaper "war," with rival bands wrecking kiosks.

One newspaper for several weeks has been stirring up anti-Semitic sentiment. Under Rumanian press regulations it is not permitted to mention the name of Carol's "girl friend," who is Jewish, but hints have appeared which are unmistakable.

Two Jewish newspapers assailed anti-Semitism and newspaper distributers took up the quarrel.

Police are guarding the plant of newspapers friendly to the Jews.

Party's Planks Hold Interest Of Virginia Unit

Delegation to Philadelphia Awaits Its Caucus on Representatives.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 21.—The 1936 platform and abrogation of the century-old two-thirds rule were principal topics of conversation among Virginia delegates arriving today for the Democratic convention.

Virginia interest in the platform centered around its veteran Democratic platform builder, Senator Carter Glass, Lynchburg, who is credited with drawing the recent State convention platform commending President Roosevelt's "humanitarian purposes" and wishing him "the largest measure of success in sound measures which he may hereafter project."

With this expression of the Virginia Democratic attitude toward national policies and the admonition that "at no time within the history of the Nation has adherence to the sound principles of representative democracy been more imperative than today," the delegation looked forward to its caucus to name committee representativse.

Usual Place.

It is generally conceded that Glass, who has represented Virginia on national convention resolutions committees since 1896, and who wrote the 1932 monetary plank, can have his usual place here if he wants it.

Although heading the list of Virginia delegates, the 76-year-old Senator has not indicated publicly whether he wants to be returned to the committee membership he has held since he inherited it from the late Senator John W. Daniel.

Neither has he said publicly how he stands on abrogation of the rule requiring two-thirds of the convention votes to nominate, as proposed by National Chairman James A. Farley. While the Norfolk convention was silent on the subject, both Senator Harry F. Byrd, Berryville, and Gov. George C. Peery have expressed opposition to the move on the ground that it would be unfavorable to the South.

Offers "No Apoloby."

The delegation of more than two-score comes here from a State convention where both Glass and Byrd, who have criticized the New Deal in the past, offered "no apology for their record;" condemned previous Republican Administrations and urged unbounded activity for the renomination and re-election of Mr. Roosevelt and Vice President Garner.

Its 22 votes will be cast for them under instructions included in resolutions adopted by the State convention.

Reservations were made for the two Senators at the hotel housing the National Committee headquarters. The majority of the delegation is quartered in the hotel also housing the Virginia headquarters, in the immediate vicinity of the convention hall. Senator Byrd was considering cancellation of reservations in a second hotel, across the river in Camden, N. J., because many of the Virginians reported they were staying with relatives and friends.

Wirephoto: Farley Replies to Smith Attack

Strong Farm Plank Sought

that this argument does not hold true of the farm plank, which they say must be long and specific. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, and Chester Davis, are said largely to share their views.

A novel crop insurance plan, designed to serve as a lever to bring farmers under the soil-conservation program by offering them insurance against disaster, has the reputed backing of the Secretary of Agriculture.

A variation on the crop insurance bill originally introduced by Senator Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, the plan asks increased soil-conservation subsidies, provided they are signed under the Federal soil-erosion program.

Wallace is said to be willing to appear before the Resolutions Committee, if necessary, to defend this and other specific farm aids.

Senator Murphy, of Iowa, has written a letter to Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, chairman of the Resolutions Committee, stating that the short farm plank projected will be unacceptable to the corn belt States. Former Representative Scott Ferris, of Oklahoma, tonight said some delegations he has contacted feel much the same way about it. Considerable revision of the plank, and the first real Resolutions Committee fight, appeared definitely ahead.

Revival of the party's bid for "forgotten man" support is expected to crop out in several of the party's planks, primarily in strong monopoly declarations, and possibly in a new consumer's plank.

The convention is expected to go much farther than the Republican platform in meeting the anti-monopoly views of Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, Republican independent. The Idahoan has figured prominently in the preliminary discussions.

It was recalled here that the Republican Resolutions Committee eliminated a whole paragraph of the Borah anti-monopoly proposals, setting forth conditions under which corporations would be permitted to engage in interstate commerce, banning the continuance of second degree holding companies beyond the second degree, interlocking directorates, stock watering, and discriminatory price fixing.

Leaders however were shying clear of the Idahoan's foreign relations proposals, incorporated in the Republican platform, declaring against League of Nations and World Court entry. The League and the Court are not expected to be mentioned in any Democratic plank by name.

First evidence of a New Deal attempt to steal some of the Republican platform's anti-monopoly thunder was seen here in President Roosevelt's letter to Attorney General Cummings today, forwarding a Federal Trade Commission report on alleged collusive bidding by four large steel companies on PWA financed construction projects, and asking "appropriate action."

The commission had asked Federal investigation of all evidences of identical bidding, and legislation to make "existing unfair practices unlawful."

Asked if an expression of this sort might be incorporated in the Democratic platform Attorney General Cummings said here tonight the "substance of that matter might very well be considered by the resolutions committee."

Cummings admitted he had been at work on "certain phases" of the platform. Asked about anti-monopoly proposals, he said:

"We always have written a monopoly plank, not only for ourselves but the Republicans, too. In fact, the Republicans have just appropriated the monopoly plank we adopted in 1900."

There is a strong inclination here to avoid raising the constitutional issue, even to the extent Gov. Landon suggested to the Republicans—namely, to give the States authority, if they do not now have it, to enact wages and hours legislation for women. Delegates are not at all certain the Democrats should go a step further, and urge a constitutional amendment giving the Federal Government this power. In fact, sentiment inclines toward sloughing over the question of any constitutional amendment, by taking the stand that the Federal Government already has the power to do what it needs to do.

Cummings tonight declined to discuss the constitutional issue, other than to insist smilingly:

"Everything we propose is constitutional."

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, is expected to lay the same proposals before the Democratic resolutions committee that he carried to Cleveland, and his recommendations for requiring a two-thirds vote by the Supreme Court on constitutional questions, and for a wages and hours constitutional amendment for women, may meet the same fate they met in Cleveland—the discard.

Another labor force, that of John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers, whose bill for regulation of the bituminous coal industry died with the Seventy-fourth Congress, will be felt here. Senator Joseph Guffey, co-author of the measure, said tonight the Pennsylvania delegation will submit a Federal bituminous coal plank, along Guffey bill lines.

Chairman Wagner, of the resolutions committee, arrived here tonight, after reportedly having weekend discussions with President Roosevelt. He is saying nothing on platform for publication. Postmaster General Farley said today Wagner may open platform hearings even before his resolutions committee is appointed on Tuesday.

Farley denied the convention will be influenced by the new Union Party in shaping its platform, or that he has been "talking with Washington about a third party."

"There is no reason why we should rearrange any plans because of a third party," Farley told reporters.

Progressive Party Rally Postponed

Omaha, Nebr., June 21 (AP).—Dr. Henry Hoffman, 84, has announced postponement of the annual convention of his "Progressive" Party.

He sat on the front porch of his home yesterday, surrounded by emty chairs, and awaited arrival of the convention delegates.

He had issued a call for 2 p. m. "to nominate a President, Vice President, adopt a platform and transact such other business as may come before the convention."

The chairs were all vacant at 2 o'clock. An hour later, the doctor still had no one to call to order.

The doctor was accustomed to low attendance. There were but eight delegates in 1932, two of them being the Doctor and his former housekeeper. But no delegates was a new low.

Editors of 40 States Open Maine Convention

Poland Spring, Maine, June 21 (AP). Editors and publishers from 40 States assembled here tonight for the fifty-first annual convention of the National Editorial Association.

At their first convention in the Pine Tree State, the visitors faced a three-day program of business sessions, dinners and subsidiary meetings, topped by a four-day 1,000-mile tour of the most favored spots of Maine. The meeting began officially at a dinner tonight. Getting down to business tomorrow, the delegates' first interest centered on the annual address of President Robert H. Pritchard, publisher of the Weston (Va.) Democrat.

Advance Guard From Maryland In Philadelphia

Delegates' Course Watched After 'Jeffersonian' Stand in State.

Philadelphia, June 21.—Advance guard of the Maryland delegation to the Democratic National Convention, Howard Bruce, the State's national committeeman; William Stanley, former United States Assistant Attorney General, and Robert B. Ennis, one of Baltimore's Democratic leaders, arrived here tonight.

The Maryland delegation, 96 strong, representing but 16 votes, will arrive tomorrow night. The Marylanders will stay at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel.

Bruce reported his presence to Chairman James A. Farley of the national committee and started on a search for gallery tickets, which seem to be as scarce as hens with teeth.

Tydings Chairman.

Senator Millard E. Tydings will be chairman of the Maryland delegation. Bruce thought Senator George L. Radcliffe, close friend of President Roosevelt, would represent the State on the resolutions committee.

Some interest has developed in the course which the Maryland delegation will follow here because the recent Maryland Democratic State convention, on motion of William C. Walsh, of Cumberland, adopted a resolution urging that the party adhere to its traditional Jeffersonian principles.

At the time this was taken as an instruction to the delegation to make a fight for a platform planned along conservative lines, with the emphasis on State rights. Whether the delegation makes such a fight seems to be up to Senator Radcliffe.

Bruce Silent on Issue.

Bruce declined to discuss this phase of the delegation's attitude, explaining that it was up to the delegation to decide what course it wished to take.

Bruce explained he had received assurances that all of his 48 delegates and 48 alternates would be seated. For a time this appeared doubtful. Usually Maryland sends 32 delegates and an equal number of alternates to the Democratic National Convention with one-half vote each.

In order to avoid factional quarrels this year, it was decided to expand the delegation to 48, with an equal number of alternates, with one-third vote each. But that solution created a seating problem for the convention managers, which now appears also to have been settled.

City Shines Up Keys and Prices For Democrats

ument because of its phrase about of-by-and-for-the-people; and three, that the aged members who sit immovable in the windows and contemplate the passersby are dusted off every spring and fall on set dates.

Signs of Welcome.

Anyway, by way of welcome to the first Democratic convention in Philadelphia's long history, the Union League Club has set up above its antique brownstone porch a huge sign, which says in glittering colored lights:

"Landon and Knox, 1936—Love of Country Leads!"

On each side of the lettering is a flag, also in colored lights, one the American flag, the other, the Blue and White Union League flag, which omits the communistic red.

The arriving Democrats, their foreheads free of the furrows that creased Republican brows at Cleveland, appear set for their first entirely harmonious session in the memory of living man.

They seem wholly confident of victory in November, scoff at the dissenters who have walked out on the convention, anticipate no difficulty in changing the two-thirds rule that has plagued them for a century and are chiefly engaged in planning a good time for one and all.

The list of social events scheduled in their honor is staggeringly long, filling several newspaper columns of fine print, and such events as "baseball game, Phillies vs. St. Louis," "ice skating carnival," "Mummers' parade," and "midget auto races," appear on the official convention program of events.

Looking Its Best.

The town actually is scrubbed behind the ears for the convention. Five and one-half months' work has gone into preparation for the week-long session and from the $5,300,000 municipal auditorium out by Franklin Field to the flag-hung downtown section the city has been prettified on a mammoth scale.

Statisticians already are claiming more people will be here during the convention than have ever visited the city at any one time, even including the American Legion and Shrine conventions during the Sesqui-centennial Exposition in 1926.

Particularly striking at a first-hand glance over the convention setup are the complete and elaborate arrangements for Democratic women here. Feminine delegates and visiting wives are being sumptuously cared for by the Democratic women's groups of the city, which have joined to provide a women's convention club on the roof of the Bellevue-Stratford, with their own bar, handy secretaries to take down letters to Friend Husband back home, hostesses to arrange bridge games, suggest bargain sales, trips to shrines or rides through parks and suburbs. Fleets of automobiles await their whims, and there are literally scores of functions, from scrapple breakfasts to cocktail parties, planned for them.

It is understood that Senator Alben W. Barkley, the keynoter, whose merest confidential whisper would win second place in any legitimate hog-calling contest, arrived today and ordered a half-dozen full length mirrors sent to his room. This could not be confirmed.

Democratic Donkey Bites Feeder's Hand

Philadelphia, June 21 (AP).—A donkey, posing temporarily as the emblem of the Democratic Party, caused consternation in a hotel lobby today when he bit the hand that fed him.

The animal, belonging to Winfield A. Huppach, former chairman of the New York State Democratic committee, ate sugar from the hand of Mrs. Katherine De Reeder, hotel press agent, while cameras clicked and onlookers chuckled.

Apparently frightened by so much attention, he nipped a finger of Mrs. De Reeder's outstretched hand and promptly put an end to the show. Mrs. De Reeder was given anti-tetanus serum at a hospital.

Farley Defends Employe Right To Donate Cash

Non-Merit Workers Able to Contribute to Party, Chairman Says.

Philadelphia, June 21.—James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, in a radio talk tonight told Federal employes not under civil service that they have a right to contribute to the support of their party so long as they do not do so through Federal officers or any other employe of the Government.

Farley's talk was in answer to criticisms by Republican members of Congress that he was using the Postoffice Department to sell "nominator" tickets to local meetings called to hear, by radio, the acceptance speech of President Roosevelt here Saturday night.

"As national chairman, I am not going to permit these people to be deprived of their rights or be read out of the Democratic Party just because a few opposition leaders would like to scare them out of their loyalty," he said.

The "nominator" tickets are being sold at $1 apiece, the proceeds to go to the Democratic campaign fund. Farley expects to raise $1,000,000 in this way.

"You and I know," he said to the radio audience, "that this fund will not match in volume the contributions of the rich and powerful who will finance the opposition party. This is so because that party has always stood for special favors and private control of the people's Government. The American public is not fooled by criticism of your plain, homely support of the man you believe in."

Roosevelt Works Overtime on Bills

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt worked overtime last night in his study on the second floor of the White House, reviewing more than 100 bills sent to his desk in the closing hours of Congress.

He attended services in the morning at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, accompanied by William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to Russia. After a conference with Bullitt, he retired to his study in the afternoon and returned there to work immediately after dinner tonight.

In addition to legislative matters, Mr. Roosevelt gave some attention to the speech scheduled for next Saturday night when he will accept the Democratic nomination for President in Philadelphia.

Notables Mourn At Fletcher Rites

Jacksonville, Fla., June 21 (AP).—Officials high in the Nation's public affairs joined sorrowing Floridians today in final tribute to Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, veteran of 27 years' service in the upper branch of Congress.

Senator Fletcher, 77, who died Wednesday in Washington, was buried near the graves of William James Bryan and Nathan P. Bryan, brothers, who also served Florida in the Senate.

Funeral services for Florida's senior Senator were conducted in the Duval County Armory.

The body had lain in state at the city hall since arriving from the National Capital this morning. Prior to going to the Senate in 1908 Fletcher served two terms as Mayor of Jacksonville.

Police estimated between 4,000 and 5,000 persons passed by the flag-draped mahogany casket surrounded by flowers from many of the country's prominent persons.

Hacker Held, Aid Hunted in Robbery

Police last night held a taxi driver on charges of investigation and were looking for another man in connection with the robbery of Edgar W. MacBrayne, former aviation pilot, who told police he was robbed of $300 in cash and jewelry valued at $800 by two men he hired to take him to Philadelpiha in a taxicab Saturday night.

Walter H. Baker, 38, 1812 Ingleside terrace northwest, admitted, police said, that he and a companion robbed MacBrayne, a former official in the Department of Commerce, of $350, which MacBrayne had just obtained from cashing bonus bonds, an imported watch valued at $500 and a diamond ring, valued at $300.

MacBrayne, who was recently released from Mount Alto Hospital, reported the theft to police on his return from Philadelphia. He said he hired Baker to drive him to Philadelphia and paid the other man $10 to act as relief driver on the trip.

Police searched Baker's home and found the jewelry and arrested the taxi driver. Later, they found $140, allegedly part of MacBrayne's bonus money, thrust behind the bathtub in Baker's apartment.

Rally Will Hear Report on Help For Children

Widespread Program to Aid Underprivileged to Be Emphasized.

Kiwanis clubs, on the surface, may seem little more significant than good-natured groups which meet for weekly luncheons. But the members, who pride themselves on being "average businessmen," have been working since 1922 on one of the most comprehensive programs for service to underprivileged children ever set in motion by a volunteer organization.

Reports of that work, now being carried on by 1,410 Kiwanis clubs, will be presented in the next three days at the twentieth annual convention of Kiwanis International, which opened here last night.

The individual clubs scattered throughout the United States and Canada may choose the service activities which are most needed in their communities, but all are united in bringing about "A Square Deal to the Underprivileged Child —A Future Citizen."

Under direction of John F. Eastwood, of Los Angeles, international chairman of the committee for the underprivileged child, Kiwanians have placed thousands of crippled children in hospitals, have bought hundreds of pairs of glasses for boys and girls who were retarded in their school work by subnormal vision, have provided milk, hot lunches and cold liver oil for the undernourished.

In many communities the Kiwanians act as "brothers" or "daddies" to youngsters whose living conditions are below normal.

These self-appointed "relatives" visit the homes of their "adopted" children once a month, take the boys and girls to the dentist and doctor at regular intervals, start $5 savings accounts for them and arrange for them to attend camp for two weeks in the summer.

The Kiwanis brother or daddie also has the child visit him at his home monthly, takes an interest in the youngster's school work and social life, and sees that he gets the proper amount of recreation.

The thousands of delegates and visitors to the convention here this week will find that the Washington Kiwanis Club is holding up its end of the work among underprivileged children.

For many years the Capital organization has maintained a weekly clinic at Children's Hospital, where several hundred crippled youngsters receive treatment under direction of Dr. Custic Lee Hall.

Hospitalization, nursing care and orthopedic treatment are supplied. Visits are made to the homes of the children by the members of the Instructive Visiting Nurses Society. In all, more than $50,000 has been spent here by the Kiwanis in trying to make life better and happier for underprivileged boys and girls.

An extensive exhibit of photographs at Constitution Hall, convention headquarters, shows the work being carried on by other clubs. Some have equipped hospital rooms, others have established health camps and still others have set up clinics for tuberculosis.

Four Pastors Defy New Church Rule

Philadelphia, June 21 (AP).—Four pastors of the new Presbyterian Church of America defied the authority of the established Presbyteries in Philadelphia and Wilmington today by preaching in churches of the parent organization.

At the same time the congregation of the Collingswood (N. J.) Presbyterian Church refused to recognize the credentials of the Rev. T. Beeber Taggart, of Pittman, sent by the West Jersey Presbytery to take possession of the church. The Rev. Carl McIntire, suspended by the general assembly, delivered the sermon.

Three ministers in Wilmington, members of the new church who repudiated the New Castle Presbytery, preached in their pulpits, while another, suspended by the general assembly, delivered a sermon in the home of a parishioner.

Big Ransom Asked For Missionary

Shanghai (Monday), June 22 (AP). Manchurian reports reaching here today said the Chinese bandits holding the Rev. Joseph Burns, American Catholic missionary, who was captured February 5, had demanded 5,000,000 Chinese dollars (about $1,500,000) for his release.

Artillery and supplies also were demanded in a letter written in Chinese and bearing the missionary's signature.

The letter was carried to Mukden from the bandits' lair on a mountain peak in southeast Manchuria.

(Father Burns was seized by bandits near Tunghua, Manchukuo, and soldiers sent in pursuit of the bandits met with failure.

(The missionary was connected with the Maryknoll Mission, of Ossining, N. Y., and his father, Edward G. Burns, lived in Toledo, Ohio. He is 35 years old.)

Hamilton to Open Race By Talk in N. Y. Tonight

New York, June 21 (AP).—The Republican campaign in New York State will be opened tomorrow night by John D. M. Hamilton, national chairman, in an address at a testimonial dinner here.

C. Wayland Brooks, 38-year-old Republican candidate for Governor of Illinois, will preside.

Hamilton will speak over the radio from 8:30 p. m. to 9 p. m., Eastern standard time.

Italian King Receives 4 Envoys as 'Emperor'

Rome, June 21 (AP).—Four new diplomatic envoys to Rome presented their credentials to King Victor Emmanuel today and used a new formula in such cases.

They addressed themselves to the "King of Italy" only, but had their credentials acknowledged by "the King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia." The envoys were the ministers of Austria, Egypt, Haiti and Iran.

As Kiwanis Convention Eve Meeting Attracted 5,000 Persons

Great Advance In Plane Travel Shown by U. S.

Bureau of Air Commerce Reports Huge Increase in Craft, Passengers.

Three times as many airplanes are flying in the United States now than ten years ago; the number of miles by commercial and private fliers has increased four times while 17 times as many pounds of air mail and 149 times as many passengers are being carried by scheduled airlines.

Those are outstanding advances in civil aviation in the last ten years recorded by the Bureau of Air Commerce in the current issue of its Air Commerce Bulletin.

In 1926 only 5,782 passengers were carried by airlines throughout the country. Last year passenger traffic averaged more than 2,300 persons daily.

Air-mail poundage has swelled from 810,855 pounds ten years ago to 13,779,608 pounds in 1935, while air express tonnage had increased in the same period from 3,555 pounds to 5,511,737 pounds.

The tremendous advance in civil aviation has not been steady. Like every other enterprise, the aircraft industry suffered during the depression, but the bureau's statistics indicate that the industry is pulling out as rapidly—if not more so—than many other industries.

The number of firms turning out aircraft is back at 1,500, the 1929 and 1930 mark, two and a half times as many firms as were making airplanes in 1926. The value of airline airplanes in service in 1935 already exceeds the boom day values.

Last year the 459 planes operated by airlines were worth $12,465,000 compared to 525 planes worth $12,000,000 in 1929 and 128 planes worth $1,838,462 in 1926.

The years between 1926 and the stock market crash witnessed the greatest advances, the bureau's statistics show, with a new "boom" apparently in the making in the last two years.

Rites Held for 11 Drowned at Picnic

Lubec, Me., June 21 (AP).—Two thousand persons stood with bowed, bared heads today and saw the bodies of 11 children, drowned in a school picnic tragedy, buried in two cemeteries. Six persons, two of them mothers of victims, collapsed.

Nine boys and girls were buried in a mass funeral at West Lubec Cemetery and funerals of two others were held afterward at Mount Hope Cemetery, 2 miles distant. Requiem high mass will be sung tomorrow for the twelfth victim, Daniel McCurdy, 10.

The children, whose ages ranged from 8 to 16, were among the 17 occupants of a 14-foot motorized dinghy which capsized in choppy Lake Gardner, 20 miles away, Friday.

Only four children and the operator, Calvin Lundin, 56, Lubec Ridge cripple, escaped.

Lundin, virtually absolved of negligence by county officials, collapsed while attending the larger funeral service. He had been ill, from grief and exhaustion, since the tragedy, and left his bed to attend.

Five women also collapsed, hysterical with grief.

Judge Mack Improved After Digestive Attack

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 21 (AP). Judge John E. Mack, who will nominate President Roosevelt for a second term at the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia this week, was recovering today from an attack of nervous indigestion.

Mack suffered the attack Friday night after returning from Washington, where he conferred with the President.

At the Mack home it was said that the judge's illness would not keep him from the convention. He hopes to leave Tuesday morning.

Hindenburg Reported Flying Over Halifax

Halifax, June 21 (AP).—A giant aircraft believed to be the German Zeppelin Hindenburg passed low over Halifax City at 9:25 p. m. A. D. T. (8:25 Eastern Daylight time) tonight.

The Hindenburg is on its third flight to the United States.

Thick fog blanketed the Nova Scotia coast and there was little wind.

Kiwanis Convention Opened

those who went down with the Titanic in 1912 with the mad stampede that followed the burning of the Morro Castle in 1934.

Blaming the war and the depression as causes of present attitudes, Dr. Clausen urged his audience "to believe and not to belittle." Otherwise, he said, one set up a vicious circle of scorn which ended with the finger being pointed at himself.

Before Dr. Clausen's address, speeches of welcome to visiting Kiwanians were made by Dr. Lonsdale J. Roper, governor of the Capital Kiwanis district, and Bynum E. Hinton, president of the Kiwanis Club of Washington. The response was made by Dr. William J. Carrington, immediate past International president.

The musical part of the program opened with a concert by the Lenoir High School Band, of Lenoir, N. C. It was followed with a solo by Wallace Williams, boy singer from Macon, Ga., who is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club there.

There was a singing by the A Capello Choir of Washington First Congregational Church and by the Savannah, Ga., male chorus. Then, after a moment of silence in memory of dead Kiwanians, the program concluded with benediction by the Rev. Edward H. Roach, pastor of St. Matthew's Catholic Church.

Harper Gatton, of Madisonville, Ky., the international president, presided at the affair last night. The group singing was conducted by George W. Campbell. Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of Washington Hebrew Congregation, delivered the invocation.

Registration began early yesterday at Constitutional Hall and continued almost until time for the religious musicale at 8 o'clock in Sylvan Theater, the opening event on the program.

Ever since Washington was selected a year ago as the convention place, the Kiwanians have been urged to bring their wives and children to the Capital so they may make educational trips and visit places of historic interest while the men are attending business sessions at Constitution Hall.

Most of the delegates to the international convention, first ever held here, evidently decided a "family" convention was a good idea. The registration counters throughout yesterday were lined with almost as many women as men.

Hundreds of youngsters accompanied their parents and were presented with convention badges, smaller than those worn by their fathers.

Although the religious musicale last night opened the convention, the meeting will not begin formally until today at 9:15 a. m. in Constitution Hall, where President Gotton will deliver his message.

Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, also will speak at the morning session. The afternoon will be given over to conference. Beginning at 8 p. m., All-Kiwanis Night will be observed, with Kiwanis clubs throughout the United States and Canada meeting simultaneously with the International group in Washington.

Roe Fulkerson, editorial writer for the Kiwanis magazine, and Gatton will speak. The International officers and District Governors will be presented.

Other speakers scheduled for the convention include Will Durant, J. Edgar Hoover and Col. T. Russ Hill.

The Kiwanis organization, which began in 1915 when a club of businessmen was formed in Detroit, now has 1,858 clubs with a total membership of 86,326.

The delegates representing the total membership streamed into Washington by the hundreds yesterday. California's delegation came in on a special train at 3:45 p. m. It was preceded to Union Station by special trains bearing groups from Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Illinois, Iowa, Boston, Atlanta, Birmingham, Savannah, and Louisville.

Two more special trains are scheduled to reach Washington, one today and one tomorrow. The Little Rock delegation will arrive at 2 p. m. today and the Atlantic City Kiwanians with their families are to get here tomorrow night in time to join one of the 29 district dinners.

Convention headquarters are at the Mayflower, but all of the large hotels are filled with convention attenders. The visitors are expected to spend at least $500,000 during their stay here.

Transfer to Alcatraz Is Awaited by Mahan

By the Associated Press.

Sanford Bates, director of the Federal Prison Bureau, said yesterday he believed William Mahan, kidnaper, was scheduled for transfer to Alcatraz Island Penitentiary from McNeil Island, Wash., penitentiary.

Harmon Metz Waley, Mahan's coconspirator in the $200,000 kidnaping of George Weyerhaeuser, 9-year-old heir to a Tacoma, Wash., lumber fortune, is in Alcatraz now. Waley's wife, Margaret, is serving a long term at the Milan (Mich.) jail.

Mahan was sentenced to 60 years in the penitentiary.

Man and Woman Soar 2,500 Feet in Glider

Elmira, N. Y., June 21 (AP).—Riding on excellent soaring winds, a two-place glider piloted by a Hawthorne, Calif., man and woman soared to what is believed to be a new altitude record for two-seater gliders today, second day of the seventh annual national soaring contest.

The craft reached a height of 2,500 feet, according to its altimeter, during a flight that laster 6 hours 56 minutes. Pilots were Miss Lucretia Buxton, daughter of Jay Buxton, veteran California pilot, and Fred C. Barnes.

The 1936 national contest is the first in which Miss Buxton has flown.

Help to Public Pledged Here By Trade Unit

Connecticut Ave. Group Ready to Render Aid During Summer.

The Connecticut Avenue Association has announced that, although it has held its final meeting of the present season, its members will hold themselves ready during the summer to serve the public in any way possible.

The association, first organized in 1922, is comprised of more than 100 business men, whose aim is to offer a variety of quality merchandise at reasonable prices and under attractive conditions. In many of the shops the proprietor himself greets the customers.

Their efforts have contributed largely to building up the Connecticut avenue shopping area from K street to Florida avenue and two blocks to the east and west. The association also was instrumental in causing the Mayflower Hotel to be built on Connecticut avenue.

After its first burst of activity the association remained dormant for several years. Then about three years ago it renewed its activities.

The spring and autumn style shows which it conducts annually have become part of the program of every Washington shopper as well as of the association.

The association holds monthly meetings at the Mayflower, taking up civic as well as business matters. It has fought for improved bus and street-car service, better traffic conditions, and for more parking space.

In the future the association plans to aid in giving advance notice of all city-wide celebrations, and to urge its members to participate in such programs.

The association is headed by C. A. Martin. Harry Kronheimer is first vice president; Alfred Pasternek, second vice president; Jack Rollins, secretary, and L. E. Schreiner, treasurer.

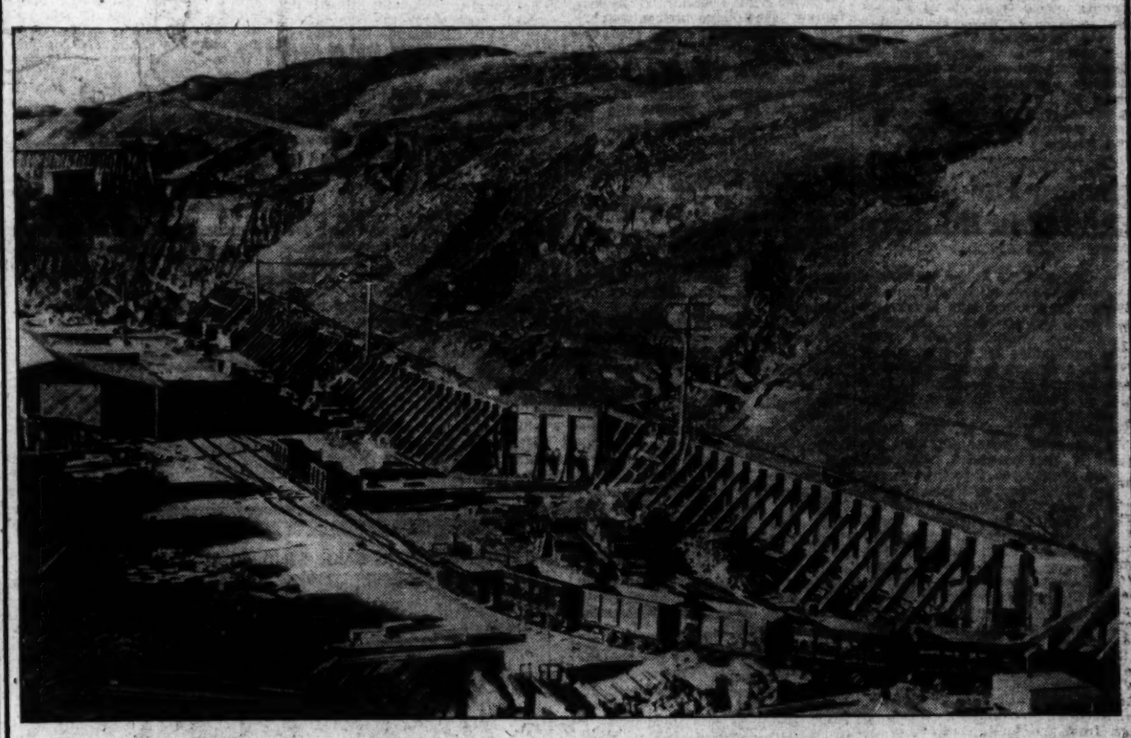
Is the New Deal Helping Recovery?



WHEN America goes to the polls to elect a President next November, the voters' answer to one question—more than any other campaign issue—will decide the fate of parties and candidates for the next four years?

"Are the acts of the present Administration helping or hindering recovery?"

Recently the American Institute of Public Opinion conducted an impartial Nation-wide referendum on that question to learn exactly how American voters feel about the matter at this point of the campaign.

The returns from this latest poll of public opinion will be made known next Sunday in AMERICA SPEAKS in The Washington Post. You'll find them particularly interesting at this time because of their significance in relation to the campaign. And, like other Institute poll results brought to you each week by The Post, important as a scientifically accurate barometer of current national affairs.

Which reminds us: if you want to know where America is going—KEEP YOUR EYE ON PUBLIC OPINION in

Lung Infection Proves Fatal To von Buelow

Nazi Foreign Secretary Had Diplomatic Post at Embassy Here.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 21—Bernhard W. von Buelow, 51, German secretary of state for foreign affairs, died today of complications from a lung inflamation by grippe.

Von Buelow, who was born June 19, 1885, was stricken ill with severe case of the grippe May 31 and complications set in.

A bachelor, the diplomat was considered to be one of the most studious and hard-working men in the diplomatic service.

His death deprived the foreign office of its most renowned member and opens the way for Adolf Hitler to place his own candidate in this key spot.

Among successors mentioned to Von Buelow are Joachim von Ribbentrop, now Hitler's personal ambassador extraordinary, and Dr. Hans H. Dieckhoff.

Von Buelow in one of his first diplomatic assignments was attache of the embassy at Washington from 1911 untill 1915. He was particularly active in foreign affairs in the government of the late Chancellor Bruening.

Last year Von Buelow delivered Reichfuehrer Hitler's protest to Great Britin, through the British ambassador, against the resolution of the League of Nations censuring Germany's decision to rearm.

There had been rumors recently in Berlin Von Buelow, of the pre-Nazi diplomatic school, was slated to be replaced by Joachim von Ribbentrop.

Von Buelow was a nephew of the late imperial German chancellor of the same name, a "blueblood" and a career man.

The blue-eyed, gray-haired foreign expert was reticent, a ceaseless worker and an indefatigable acquirer of detailed knowledge. He considered sleep an unwelcome interruption to work.

Was Bruening Aid.

His grandmother, the venerable Countess Vitzthum, confided once to a friend: "Chancellor Bruening does not exert a good influence on my grandson. The two just work all the time, and you can't get Bernhard to take his mind off the cares of office."

There was only one hobby in Herr von Buelow's life: collecting German pfennings from the time they were first coined until today. By a strange irony of fate, the German diplomat was unable to find a pfenning from the year of his birth, 1885. He declined, however, to go to a dealer in coins, but instead continued to turn over every pfenning that came into his hands in order to discover, whether at last the coveted year 1885 would turn up.

Smoking an occasional cigarette was his only "vice." There was a time when Von Buelow had a pet dog, but somehow the dog went astray, and he was too busy with foreign office matters to find out what happened to the canine.

Unlike most members of the diplomatic set, Von Buelow had an aversion to dancing. It was difficult to persuade him to attend big dinners. His hospitality was limited to intimate lunches for about a dozen persons.

Started in Washington.

Starting as an attache at the German Embassy in Washington in 1912, he rose rapidly, after having served in the army during the Great War, via the embassy in Constantinople, the legation in Athens, and the Wilhelmstrasse in Berlin to the position of sectional chief in charge of the department handling League of Nations affairs, to under-secretary to Foreign Minister Julius Curtius in June, 1930. He then filled the vacancy caused by Carl von Schubert's becoming ambassador to Rome.

Von Buelow was one of the first blue-bloods to place himself at the disposal of the republican regime after the collapse of the empire in 1918. He became an active member of the Democratic Party to which also Ambassador Johann Henrich von Bernstorff belonged.

Between 1919 and 1923 Von Buelow lived in retirement, on furlough from the foreign office. He then wrote a book on the League of Nations on his estate in Mecklenburg-Strelitz which attracted much attention.

HARRY H. R. HELWIG.

Harry Helwig, Civic, Business Figure, Is Dead

Board of Trade Leader in Poor Health for Long Period.

Harry H. R. Helwig, prominent member of the Washington Board of Trade and a leader in Washington's civic and fraternal organizations, died yesterday at his home, 1015 Rhode Island avenue northeast. He was 49.

Mr. Helwig, who had been in failing health for some time, was found dead in bed by his wife.

At the time of his death, Helwig was assistant manager of Underwood-Elliott Fisher Co. and chairman of the membership committee of the Washington Board of Trade. He had been connected with Underwood-Elliott Fisher for more than 25 years.

Came Here at 12.

Helwig came to Washington from his birthplace, Mount Carmel, Pa., at the age of 12. He was boy soloist for many years in St. John's Episcopal Church. Subsequently during his long career as a leader in Washington he was soloist in the choir of the First Presbyterian Church and the Church of the Covenant.

Prominent in fraternal affairs, Helwig was past master of Acacia Masonic Lodge No. 18, and past patron of Acacia Chapter No. 28, Order of Eastern Star.

He was formerly a director of the Board of Trade. He was retired from that position in 1934 when a dinner was given in his honor at the Mayflower Hotel and attended by members of the board and prominent Washingtonians.

Was iven Watch.

At the dinner in honor of his retirement he was presented a watch. Under his leadership the Board of Trade's membership climbed more than 900 in a single year, 1933.

Helwig leaves his widow, Mrs. Leona C. Helwig, a daughter, Mrs. Evalyne I. Helwig; his father, Dr. H. P. Helwig, of Doylestown, Pa.; and two sisters, Mrs. J. G. Glasco and Mrs. Arthur J. Finigan, both of Philadelphia.

Funeral services will be held from Hysong's funeral parlors at Thirteenth and M streets northwest, tomorrow at 1 p. m.

Burial will follow at Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Elihu Cutler Dies; Was Auto Pioneer

New York, June 21 (AP).—Elihu H. Cutler, manufacturer of three-wheeled "horseless carriages" in the 90s and later the head of a group which lost automobile patent lawsuits against Henry Ford, died at his home today. He was 80.

Cutler later became a wholesale grain merchant in Springfield, Mass. He retired 15 years ago.

Born in Ashland, Mass., Cutler spent his boyhood there. In the late 80s he helped form the Electron Manufacturing Co., later absorbed by the Otis Elevator Co. Then he collaborated with Harry Knox in building three-wheeled air-cooled automobiles and became the head of the Knox Automobile Co.

As the industry expanded, Cutler became president of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, all of whom had rights to the Selden patents. Litigation arose with Ford, then a little known Midwesterner, and Cutler led the organization's losing fight.

Maj. Harmon's Funeral Rites Are Tomorrow

Coast Artillery Officer, Capital Native, Died at Walter Reed.

Funeral services for Maj. Benjamin Franklin Harmon, 42, of the Coast Artillery Corps, an expert on antiaircraft guns, will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. in Arlington National Cemetery.

He died Saturday at Walter Reed Hospital after a long illness. His last station was as an instructor in antiaircraft at the Tactical School at Maxwell Field, Ala.

A native of this city, he was the son of the late Capt. Eugene B. Harmon of the U. S. Navy, and a nephew of the late Judson Harmon, former Governor of Ohio.

Maj. Harmon received his commission as a second lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Corps in 1917, upon graduation from Purdue University. During the war he served with the Fourth French Army at Verdun, the British antiaircraft school, the headquarters antiaircraft forces of the A. E. F. and as instructor of the American antiaircraft school.

On his return to this country he continued his antiaircraft instruction at the Fort Monroe Coast Artillery School. He received his major's promotion last August.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Julia B. Harmon, formerly of Hampton, Va., a son, Benjamin F., jr.; his mother, Mrs. Jane D. Harmon, of Baltimore, and a brother, William M., of Greensboro, N. C.

4 Burned to Death After Auto Crash

Mountainside, N. J., June 21 (AP).—Four persons were burned to death and three others injured in an automobile collision here today.

The dead were Mrs. Rosa Nota, 68, New York; Lena Nota, 24, a daughter; Mrs. Rose Gambi, 45, another daughter, North Bergen, and Anthony Ditiomo, 10, New York.

Firemen arrived at the scene of the accident to find flames shooting high above the automobile of Joseph Gambi, 41. He and his wife, Rose, were lying by the car, but it was not until the fire had been brought under control that firemen knew three other persons had been in it.

Police identified the driver of the second car involved in the accident as Lawrence J. Toohers, 27, Elizabeth. He was accompanied by Miss Helen Barrett, 27, North Plainfield.

Police Chief Charles Honecker, unable to learn how the accident occurred, said both drivers would be charged with homicide by autobile.

Porter, Novelist, Dies of Pneumonia

Torrington, Conn., June 21 (AP).—Harold Everett Porter, novelist, short-story writer and playwright, who used the pen name of Holworthy Hall, died during last night in the Charlotte Hungerford Hospital of pneumonia. He was 48.

He was brought to the hospital from Washington, Conn., two days ago.

He was a native of Boston, Mass., and a graduate of Harvard, having received several degrees there, including a doctor of letters.

His latest novel was "Colossus." Before that, however, he had written short stories for nationally known magazines and other novels, including "Six Best Cellars" and "Egan."

Porter was a member of the Authors, the Players and the Harvard clubs of New York.

He left his wife and three children.

Nannie H. Janney Dies in Alexandria

Miss Nannie H. Janney, daughter of the late Maj. Eli and Cornelia Janney, died unexpectedly Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Noel Garner, 415 Prince street, Alexandria.

Miss Janney's father was a member of Gen. Robert E. Lee's staff in the Confederate Army, and was inventor of the Janney coupler, now in use by practically all railroads. She had spent the greater part of her life in Alexandria and for several years had made her home with Mrs. Garner.

Funeral services will be conducted at Demaine's funeral home at 4 p. m. today by the Rev. Percy Foster Hall, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Hatch Dead In North Carolina

Mrs. Martha Hodgen Hatch, mother of Commander Charles B. Hatch, of this city, died yesterday at Blowing Rock, N. C.

Mrs. Hatch had spent much time in Washington during the last ten years, visiting at the home of her son and daughter-in-law. She was a native of Eliabethton, Ky., but had lived in Champaign, Ill., for many years.

Surviving, besides Commander Hatch, is a brother, A. C. Hodgen, of Russelville, Ky.

Funeral services and burial will be held tomorrow at Champaign.

H. R. Duryee Dies; Was PWA Auditor

Henry R. Duryee, 53, of 3813 W street northwest, died unexpectedly yesterday at Emergency Hospital.

Mr. Duryee, a life-long resident of Washington, was an auditor with PWA. He formerly headed his own brokerage house here.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Louise Duryee and three sons, Henry R., jr., Edward and Albert Duryee, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow at Gawler's Chapel. Burial will bein Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Silver Spring Man Hurt When Auto Hits Pole

Wilfred Curry, of Silver Spring, Md., was injured early yesterday when he lost control of his car on the Seventh street pike near Wheaton, Md. The auto turned over two or three times and struck a telephone pole.

Stars Burst Like Firecrackers, Wisconsin Astronomers Find

By the Associated Press.

William Bay, Wisc., June 21.—A universe made up of stars which explode periodically like a string of firecrackers was pictured tonight by astronomers who watched the "new" star blazing in the northeastern sky.

A star under this new conception is a sort of superfirecracker, which does not blow itself out in one shot but continues to burn and may explode again and again.

The "universe of fireworks" theory was proved by the Nova, or "new star," which flared up in the heavens last Thursday night, Dr. Otto Struve, director here of Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago, declared.

Scientists had disagreed for years of the reason why customarily dim stars would suddenly burn brightly and give the illusion of a "new star" appearance, Dr. Struve explained. Some said the star exploded; some said two stars collided; some said two stars roamed too close to gether and tore each other apart by gravitational pull.

Cloud of Gas.

When Nova Herculis—which appeared in December, 1934—was seen to throw off a huge cloud of gas and star dust, Dr. Struve said astronomers were pretty well agreed the explosion theory was right. The 1936 nova, he added, has provided unquestionable proof.

Unlike an earthly firecracker, which is just an inert splinter of burned cardboard after the powder inside it explodes, the star hurls out a mass of gas and cosmic matter and then gradually dims back to its normal state.

More than 70 of the heavenly "firecrackers" have exploded in the Milky Way in recent times. Out through windows in the sky astronomers have seen still more explosions.

That a star can explode more than once has been demonstrated several times. The Nova Herculis flared twice within a year, less the second time than the first. The Nova Aphiuchi exploded once in 1897 and again in 1933. A star known as T Pyxidis blew up three times, in 1890-1902 and 1920.

Growing Dimmer.

The present nova, which actually exploded between 2,000 and 3,000 years ago—it is between 2,000 and 3,000 light years away, compared to Nova Hercules' distance of 500 light years—was dimmer last night than Friday night. Dr. Struve gave its latest magnitude at 2.6.

It still remained visible to the naked eye, however, and Dr. Struve predicted it would appear redder than it did. The real color of the star's cosmic dust was "very blue," he added, which means the star is "very hot."

Bright lines of hydrogen have appeared in the spectrum, a sign that the cloud which is traveling at 600 miles a second is getting far enough away to give a nebulous effect, he said. Next astronomers expect to see signs of nebulium, a rare physical form of oxygen not seen on earth.

Trifles For The District.

The moral of the story of District legislation during the last session of Congress is pointed by the fact that the last local bill to be passed provided that Washington's permit system for boiler inspection be abolished. Largely because Congress must pay attention to such trifles, the record of new legislation for the Capital is pathetically thin.

If, as has been frequently proposed, the Commissioners could be empowered to handle details of District government, it is conceivable that Congress would find time to study and act upon the larger local problems that cry for solution. As it is, the bulk of the District measures approved by both houses consider such relatively inconsequential matters as pipe line permits, healing arts licenses and the opening of graves.

This is not to say that the efforts of the Seventy-fourth Congress in behalf of the District were entirely fruitless during the six months of the second session. Thanks to the Senate, a real advance was scored in securing for Washington a commission which promises to settle the long-standing question of the Federal Government's fair share in the cost of maintaining the Capital. The appointment of an airport commission may similarly be recorded as a real gain. After five years of wrangling, the District may confidently look forward to a day when its landing field facilities will finally be made safe.

But time for more than a few constructive accomplishments was not available. The District was robbed of its just time before Congress toward the close of the session. Next year's District committees would do well to remember this and bend every effort to bring their recommendations to the floor early in the calendar. Then the Sisson bill to repeal the ridiculous "red rider" would reach the vote so far denied it.

Then, too, perhaps the District will be allowed to join that long list of American communities which have come to recognize the barbarity of public jury trials in questions of lunacy, and the obsolescence of juvenile court practices in vogue 30 years ago. And there is a raft of other District legislation that may then receive action—the narcotics control bill, the small loans bill, the reckless driving bill, to name but a few. All should be placed high on the agenda of the next Congress.

Experts.

These are bad days for experts.

They failed lamentably to chart the course of events in the Italo-Ethiopian War. Well before the rains began that were by all predictions to find the Italian armies immobilized miles from the capital, Marshal Badoglio and his men were in Addis Ababa and Haile Selassie was on his way to exile.

They failed again last Friday. With rare exceptions they had reached what seemed the sensible conclusion that, in the boxing match between Max Schmeling and Joe Louis, the latter would win in a walk. How far off they were all the world now knows.

But let us not blame the experts too much. Human events are not and never will be as predictable as certain phenomena of nature. Those scientists who traveled thousands of miles to remote spots in Greece, Siberia and Japan to witness last week's eclipse knew to a split second when the shadow of the moon would cover the face of the sun.

They were not disappointed. What they had come to see occurred and on schedule. But when two men face each other in the prize-ring, or two armies meet on the field of battle, or in any other event where human nature plays its incalculable role, that mathematical logic which the scientist applies is often a weak reed. There are always too many imponderables, too many unknowns and unknowables.

In their own defense sporting writers, like military experts, can cite the remarks of a noted economist, practitioner in another uncertain science. On the basis of unquestionable data this scholar some years ago predicted a marked rise in business activity. But the curve of production went steadily down. Twitted on this score the economist replied:

"Should a doctor be blamed as a bad prophet if the patient whose physical condition was found perfect, and who therefore was assured of long life, goes out of the clinic and five minutes later is run over by an automobile?"

A Prodigal Congress.

During its second session the Seventy-fourth Congress broke all peace-time records for spending, authorizing outlays totaling $9,700,000,000.

Such extravagance shows either a ruthless disregard for sound fiscal policies or else an appalling ignorance of the dangers of deficit financing on a gargantuan scale. The present level of Federal expenditures cannot be attributed to the existence of an economic emergency. Although conditions are still far from normal, the natural recuperative powers of a wealthy nation have brought the country a considerable distance along the road to recovery.

With a little intelligent planning, Congress could, therefore, make ample provision for the needs of the unemployed in addition to financing the regular, non-emergency activities of the Government within the limits of a balanced budget. Instead it has chosen to authorize the spending of vast sums, by both regular departments and New Deal agencies that cannot by any rational standards be regarded as of an emergency character.

Before approving any proposal that calls for the expenditure of public funds Congress should always consider two questions. First, whether the measure satisfies a real public demand, and second, whether the country can afford it. In reviewing the work of the past session, one is forced to conclude that Congress has passed a great deal of legislation at the command of the Administration without adequately weighing its merits. And it has certainly displayed an astounding indifference to the matter of the country's capacity to shoulder the financial burdens laid upon it by the legislative program.

A lack of initiative, and an absence of effective criticism was revealed again and again when important legislation was before Congress. It unhesitatingly passed the soil conservation act, for instance, continuing AAA subsidies in a disguised form intended to meet the constitutional objections raised by the Supreme Court. No serious thought was given to the question whether such outlays ought to be continued with the passing of the pressing agricultural emergency offered as a justification for the invalidated AAA. Congress also voted to perpetuate a work relief system faulty in conception, demoralizing to beneficiaries, and excessively expensive in the per capita cost of each relief case.

Not content with authorizing the continuance of unnecessarily lavish emergency outlays, Congress with little analysis voted the largest peace-time defense appropriation in the history of the country and agreed to advance almost $1,000,000,000 to develop rural electrification and flood control programs over a period of years. More extended use of electricity and improved systems of flood control are greatly needed but it is, notwithstanding, very doubtful whether the country can afford to finance such developments on an ambitious scale during a period of rapidly mounting deficits.

Cash payment of the bonus was the culminating act of folly which enabled the Seventy-fourth Congress to break its first session spending record. That particular legislative indiscretion, for which Congress alone is responsible, gave the Administration an excuse for urging passage of one of the worst tax bills ever inflicted upon the country.

The way in which this inadequate revenue measure was forced through both houses over the protests of a well-informed senatorial minority, and hurried to a final vote to speed adjournment, strengthens the impression of legislative indifference and unthinking docility conveyed by a survey of the work of the session.

It is also significant that a number of new laws were passed extending the control of the Government over commodity and stock trading. The antiprice-discrimination act (so-called antichain store measure) provides for a far-flung system of regulation of the pricing policies of industrial concerns. Legislation of this type shows clearly that little attention has been paid to complaints that Government regulation is stifling individual initiative.

On the contrary, Congress has done all it could to repair the breaches in New Deal regulatory systems made by adverse Supreme Court decisions. And it has shown a really contemptuous disregard for warnings that unbridled spending must cease if the country is to be saved from financial ruin.

Inadequate Inspection.

Sands which wind or rain can carry away are not the first concern of present-day builders. Engineering science has demonstrated how this danger can be effectively avoided. Rather, what builders today must guard against are the sands of carelessness.

The formulae for combining brick and steel and concrete buildings have been perfected, as the towering skyline of any modern city will testify. But success depends on the most meticulous fulfillment of every quantity in the formula. When even one is neglected, such a catastrophe as overtook the builders of a Bronx apartment house last week is the result.

So unnecessary are these disasters that society has set up public authorities to guarantee strict observance of all the laws of twentieth century engineering. These failed, however, in New York and 16 workmen lost their lives in consequence when the interior of the six-story edifice collapsed. Fortunately, it is not the rule for building inspectors thus to neglect their duty. But it is no secret that inspection departments are frequently so poorly manned that only cursory attention is given every new piece of construction.

Here in Washington, where building is now booming, this fact should not be overlooked. The District has an adequate building code. But unless the temptation to skimp, made doubly alluring by the lack of adequate inspection, is sternly resisted, the best of codes is valueless. A community has every right to expect as high a sense of honor from its builders as from, say, its physicians.

Ethiopia And Manchuria.

The action taken by President Roosevelt in lifting the embargo on shipments of arms, ammunition and implements of war to Italy and Ethiopia is a realistic move and will be justified on that ground.

There can no longer be any question that the war which broke out in East Africa last fall and which led President Roosevelt, on October 5, 1935, to issue his original proclamation of neutrality, is now over. Organized national resistance to the Italian invaders by Ethiopia is obviously a thing of the past.

It is in part this situation which determined Great Britain to propose the abandonment of sanctions against Italy, despite the loss of face which such action involves for the Baldwin government. And Britain's lead will no doubt be followed, reluctantly or not, by all the other members of the League. President Roosevelt's action will doubtless be taken as confirmation of the British position and will therefore accelerate the move to wipe out sanctions.

This does not mean that there is, or is intended to be, any conscious relationship between American policy and League action. The original American proclamation of neutrality was issued in advance of the League's vote in favor of applying sanctions. The lifting of the embargo is being carried out without regard to what the League may or may not do. Nevertheless, the influence of American action on Geneva policy cannot be gainsaid. Just as the neutrality proclamation assisted the application of sanctions, so its revocation will hasten their termination.

Moreover, the Italo-Ethiopian problem still remains a source of embarrassment to this Nation and the League alike. Washington, as well as Geneva, has still to decide whether or not to recognize Italian sovereignty over Ethiopia. A minor paradox in the situation is that Ethiopia is now legally entitled to float loans in this country while Italy, under the terms of the Johnson act, cannot do so.

The problem of recognition is a thorny one and with regard to it the United States and League members are bedfellows. For both are bound by the precedent established at the time of Japan's conquest of Manchuria. Then we declared that any territorial gains made by a nation through the use of force would not be recognized. At our behest League members took a similar stand. To emphasize this policy the United States later became a signatory of the Buenos Aires nonrecognition pact, sponsored by Argentina.

It is quite true that legal pundits see a technical distinction in the American attitude toward Japan's conquest of Manchuria and Italy's conquest of Ethiopia. In the first instance the United States Government specifically invoked the Briand-Kellogg pact; in the second no mention whatever was made of the outlawry of war treaty. But from a common sense point of view such a distinction is both invidious and absurd.

The rule we shall apply in the case of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia must of necessity eventually be applied in the case of Manchukuo as well. If one violation of the Briand-Kellogg pact is overlooked, the other must be also. But in that case is the Administration prepared to announce abandonment of the much-advertised treaty which we originally sponsored and which has been about our most significant contribution to the world's peace system?

The Doctoring of Sinclair Lewis.

From the Hartford Courant.

The bestowal of the honorary degree of doctor of letters on Mr. Sinclair Lewis by Yale University recalls the similar honor paid to Mark Twain by Oxford University nearly 30 years ago. The points of resemblance between the two men are striking, their origin in the Mississippi Valley, their fondness for exaggerated humor, their hatred of cant, their devotion to democracy. They resemble each other, too, in the fact that for a long time they were not accepted by their many readers for the high literary artists that they proved to be. Whereas the generation that read "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" as they came from the press regarded Twain primarily as a humorist, the generation that read and debated "Main Street" and "Babbitt" regarded their author primarily as a satirist, clever but irritating, sometimes to the point of madness.

Both judgments were incomplete, as time has come to prove. The doctoring of Mark Twain by Oxford helped to open the eyes of his contemporaries to his real values, and the doctoring of Mr. Lewis by his alma mater may similarly prompt a new judgment on the part of those who still regard him as the irreverent mocker of all things cherished in America.

On Speculation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It may be in order to enter a defense of the much-maligned speculator in wheat and corn. In reality he performs a public service to the producer in making enormous purchases immediately after harvest when the prevailing prices would otherwise be greatly less. Likewise he performs a similar service to the consumer by selling late in the season when prices, but for his services, would be much higher.

There is a well deserved stigma which attaches to the speculator, but this applies to the speculator who buys building lots or other land which he has no intention of using himself, but which he intends to sell at an increased price to someone who wants to use it. If successful he reaps a profit which clearly belongs to the community and not to himself. He seeks to garner where he did not sow, and the ethics of this is little better than that of the highwayman. If he has to sell for less than he paid, he has, nevertheless, played a part in promoting the artificially high price of land including a temporary waste of capital. But the individual land speculator should not be blamed. He is simply taking advantage of stupid laws.

The value of building lots and of all land is directly due to its location in respect to population. It is, therefore, a public value which belongs to the people and if it were taken by a single tax, one of the great advantages resulting would be and end to land monopoly and the evil of land speculation.

Mr. Farley's Rubber Stamp.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Farley is reported in the press as predicting absolute unanimity at the Democratic convention upon the renomination of President Roosevelt. Mr. Farley does not concede a single straying delegate. He cannot imagine any delegate coming to Philadelphia and refusing to make it unanimous. Mr. Farley ought to know—he picked the delegates. What he is saying is that it will be a rubber stamp convention.

We are getting to hear quite a bit about the Farley rubber stamp. We have seen not one but two rubber stamp Congresses. Every postmaster, every Government employe, every deserving Democrat toiling in the ranks knows about Mr. Farley's rubber stamp. What more appropriate than a rubber stamp convention at Philadelphia?

Only one thing more is needed to give the Farley rubber stamp the recognition it merits. On the November ballots let it be inscribed as the official distinguishing emblem of the Democratic Party. Then every Democrat, deserving or otherwise, literate or not, can know beyond peradventure where he stands when he casts his vote. ARGUS.

Still More On The Questionnaire

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How easy it is to stir up the animals either in a zoo or in a Government office! Mr. Blanton in a playful mood tacks on to a regular bill a rider prohibiting the advocacy of Communism in the public schools. Instantly the superintendent and Board of Education protest that that is their inalienable right. For months they have given interviews and photographs to all the papers and have inspired editorial after editorial demanding the right to teach Communism. To a man up a tree or on Mars it looks as if these custodians of our school children consider that the teaching of Communism is the main function of the schools and that the whole system of public education will be destroyed by the failure to teach Communism.

In the light of such desperately earnest pleas for the right to teach Communism Mr. Blanton seems to have concluded that where there is so much fire there must be a wee bit of smoke.

A reasonable amount of common sense and dignity on the part of the school authorities would have put a stop to the farce long ago. But the Board of Education chose to play into Blanton's hands and the joke is on them. Why do they let themselves be badgered?

As long as the Board of Education continues in a state of jitters Blanton will doubtless keep on prodding. Anyhow the whole affair is a last year's bird's nest. Two weeks ago Stalin announced that Russia had returned to a democratic form of government and the very next day Roosevelt proclaimed that he had "restored democracy" to the United States. Since the Russians and the New Dealers were the only followers of the Communistic fad one wonders why our children should be compelled to take courses in political paleontology.

THOMAS OAKLEAF.
Washington, June 19.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Following are extracts from a questionnaire being mailed to Congressman Blanton, of Texas, by a group of frightened teachers:

PLEASE STATE: Your present position (Left or Right)?.....; Why.....? What State (of mind) are you trying to "represent".....? Why.....? Salary?.....: Are you really worth it?.....; How many pages of the Congressional Record (at $52 per page) did you consume this session?..... Total cost to taxpayers?.....!

Do you approve of capitalism being given any favor or support in Congress?.....; Have you ever at any time in the halls of Congress, in committee rooms, in restaurants, washrooms or elsewhere, taught or advocated the pernicious doctrines of capitalism?..... Have you ever heard the names of John D. Rockefeller or J. P. Morgan whispered in the corridors of washrooms of the Capitol?..... Have you ever read anything they said at any time?.....

Have you ever read or had in your possession copies of a schmismatical and defeatist sheet called the Wall Street Journal?..... Do you approve of its un-American policies?.....

Are you a member of the District of Columbia Bar Association? ..... Of the District Medical Association?.....Do you think physicians should be hanged, burned in the electric chair or chloroformed? ..... Have you ever read Uncle Tom's Cabin?..... If so, who is your hero in that story, Uncle Tom, Simon Legree or Little Eva?..... Would you read any or all portions of it to your grandmother aloud? In mixed company?.....

Have you looked over carefully the approved list of books on the high school reading list for English?..... On that list did you notice Julius Caesar?..... Did you know that Caesar calls attention to the Aedui and Teutons who "have all things in common" (communism)?—That H. G. Wells and Upton Sinclair's works are on that list?..... Did you know that in the high school algebra classes "radicals" and "exponents" are openly taught?....: That in physics classes under pretence of studying the spectrum "red" rays are featured prominently through the spectroscope?.....: That in biology classes, under the magnifying power of the microscope, "red" corpuscles are purposely made to look larger?..... Stood Almost Firm.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Compromise Is Impossible" is very timely. Let us hope the Senate will have the courage to do as your editoral suggests—refuse to surrender to the dictatorship of Congressman Blanton.

If the Senate agrees to any House figure reducing the lump sum below the Budget Bureau figure of $5,700,000 it will be, as your editorial says, another "victory" for Dictator Blanton. He has already won too many such "victories."

In your fight against Blantonism, I pledge you my support. The teachers should refuse to answer the Blanton questionnaire.

BERNARD L. HENNING.

The Abuse Of Credit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Gold coin turned into gold bars and buried in the State of Kentucky is no longer money. Gold and silver coin was the standard of measurement in exchanging goods and commodities prior to this Administration's activity because of its precision and stability.

The United States and the nations of the world should have retained this system of international coinage. Gold and silver is the product of labor.

Back in 1878-1882, Dr. Francis Wayland's textbooks on political economy were used in most of the leading schools and colleges. His idea upon the subject of credit ended by saying that "the abuse of credit is the chief originating causes of commercial crises, panics and revulsions." Now, how about our billions that we are getting on credit? WILLIAM S. WAUDBY.

The 'Old Gent.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Speaking of constitutions, especially "Uncle Sam's," which has been under treatment of Doctors Democrat and Republican for the past 65 years, and which recently had such a sudden relapse, it seems to me these medicos would gladly welcome a third for consultation. The only logical reason deductible for not doing so would be a stoppage of the rich pickings from such a wealthy old gent should he convalesce.

I am led to believe the old gent is getting wise to these two old cronies and their nefarious and covert designs, and it would not surprise me should he fire them both, and call in a modern enlightened consultant who does not confine himself to traditional methods, but knows that in order to relieve such a chronic case the patient's system must first be purged of the poisons administered through ignorance or design, then rebuild the tissues of the body by common-sense dieting.

Marcel Is Dead.

Many lines of poetry and prose had been written about women's hair before Marcel Berney, a product of the provincial life of France, found that if he held the curling tongs reversed he could make straight hair look like his mother's natural curls. Thus Berney developed the "marcel wave," which since has become the basis for a world-wide business. "Fashions may come and go, but every woman yearns in her heart for wavy hair," the Frenchman once said, and it was because of that belief, backed by his accidental trick with a curling iron, that his death made world-wide news.

Berney, who was 84 years old, represented modern hairdressing as a slow development from ancient days, when even the men's hair was not cut and sometimes fell below their waists. From the exaggerated masses of hair worn by the women of the middle ages to the "bob" of the present day is as long a jump in style as it is in time. In a way the history of civilization may be traced through varying styles of arranging the hair of both men and women. Perhaps the speed, simplicity, and beauty of the modern age are represented in the curled bob with which Marcel goes down in history.

Europeans Expect War

Excerpts from an article by Vincent Shean, appearing in the Redbook Magazine, appear below.

WHILE they want peace and sincerely believe their leaders' soothing words, the people of Europe are getting ready for the second attempt at the continent's suicide.

It is interesting to notice the forms this expectation takes. Frenchmen of my acquaintance are serious about war if about nothing else; they know a lot about it; they dread it as they dread nothing else in life; and they feel that it is pressing upon them with an awful imminence. I have heard Frenchmen lately say: "We have always known war would come, and now the Germans have practically admitted their intention by their deeds; for God's sake, let us make war quickly before they are any better prepared, or we shall be wiped out."

Here you have a psychological curiosity dangerous to the whole of humanity—the thought of war has changed into an expectation, and the expectation has changed into a wish to make war quickly and get it over while there is a chance of victory. Such an attitude is not uncommon among otherwise enlightened Frenchmen, and it does no good to argue with them.

The English attitude toward the same frightful probability is altogether different. It seems to me a characteristic of Englishmen—in talk, at least—to treat serious subjects with levity; and since the word war came to be so usual in conversation (during the past six or eight months), the English I know make jokes about it; they say the housing problem will become very grave in the South Sea islands when war breaks out; they are witty about Hitler's voice or Mussolini's frown; they make fun of the French, the Germans, the Italians, the Americans and the Russians. But the point is that they do talk about war a lot; and whatever their tone, it is clear that the approach of the devouring monster fills them with foreboding.

How lucky you are to be an American! is a frequent specimen of the war-ridden talk of our European contemporaries. "At least, you can stay out of the war when it comes." We may have our doubts as to whether America can ever stay out of a general war again, but even if America were involved, it could never be involved to the extent of devastation—not, that is, as the French or Germans or even the English would be involved.

You seldom get anything like a cold facing of facts. You get it least of all in England, with its traditional passion for compromise, its congenital muddle-headedness, its refusal to look any fact straight in the eye. England shilly-shallied along in the summer of 1914 until August, and war, were upon us; and it is the most commonplace truism nowadays (admitted even in the columns of the Times) that if England had declared her position soon enough, there would have been no war. But England takes forever and a day to make up her mind about contingencies of this awful nature. Observe the incident of the Hoare-Laval agreement, which would have settled the Italo-Abyssinian dispute on a basis of (practically speaking) a partition of Ethiopia. All English opinion rose in wrath against this, and poor Hoare was flung out of office, yet a settlement of this precise kind, which is the only possible settlement under the circumstances, will no doubt be negotiated before long under the auspices of people with different names (Eden and Flandin, for example), and England will have to accept it or fight.

* * * *

There may be some ray of hope in the midst of all this gloomy concentration on war, and I am tempted to see one in the very fact that everybody does so dwell upon the coming calamity. We know by the testimony of our elders that hardly anybody in Europe (except cabinet ministers, that is, and a few of their intimates) really thought war would come in 1914. At least the peoples of the great nations did not think so—all were astounded, we are told, and could not believe the thing had happened until its full horror was revealed. Exactly the opposite is the case today. From cabinet ministers and former cabinet ministers to peasants and fishermen, every type or class of European has his mind focused upon the ghastly probability that has been so plainly opened by the events of the past year. There is some faint hope to be found in this fact: It may be said that Europe will not commit suicide just yet, and that the dread which reigns in ordinary talk may have some deterrent effect upon the march of events. It may postpone that calamity, perhaps—or, as the peasants say, put it off just a little longer.

It can scarcely postpone the event forever.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Humor's Grimness.

There may be an element of humor in the plight of the 18 comic artists who were arrested for picketing a magazine office to enforce a demand for union recognition and a minimum of $15 per drawing, but the artists themselves will be the last to see the joke.

Humor is a pretty grim business, as everyone knows who has ever watched the artists at work in the monkey-house of a big syndicate, each in his own glass cage, drawing pictures from 9 to 5 under the mirthless eye of a foreman with the soul of a sales manager and a wholesale grocer's standard of humor.

At 9 a. m. they receive their script for the day, written the day before by the scenario department. Then they retire to their cells, put on their celluloid visors and sateen sleeves, sit down at their boards and draw. All the day long they draw and erase. At intervals the foreman comes through to criticize the feet on Dopey Doodles or Willy Nilly's expression as he falls through the trapdoor in the abandoned factory while spying on the kidnapers. The foreman never laughs. At best he will mark the sheet "OK," which is hysterical praise for him, and send the sketch along to the ink-monkey in the apprentice department to be gone over and lettered in waterproof black.

* * * *

It is a wholesale business now that comic strips come by the bundle, and there is no mood for hilarity in the canned-goods plant. But these are fortunate artists, nevertheless, for though they seldom hear any laughing response to their work, at least they have steady jobs as long as they keep regular hours and don't get cartoonist's cramp.

The free lance comic works on a speculative basis, and it is a severe strain on any man's spontaneity to know that when he gets a picture done some art editor, who may be feeling uncommonly rotten at the moment, may pucker up his nose and flip it back across the table, not even troubling to say, "No good." The free lance comics are one class of toilers for whom, so far as I know, the New Deal has attempted no work relief.

True, early in the Administration, when Mr. Farley was turning out a commemorative stamp for the opening of each new bar and grill, an attempt was made to promote the art of the comic strip as the true American art and to sell stamps in series of four or six, each relating an episode in the career of a typical comic strip character. But Mr. Farley, whose sense of humor is somewhat warped, replied in all seriousness that this would offend the dignity of the office of Postmaster General. A proposal to substitute comic characters for the limestone fat ladies and muscle-bound mechanics who sit above the arches of public buildings holding wheat shocks and spare motor parts, symbolizing agriculture and industry, also met rebuff, so thousands of comic artists were compelled to rock along as rather puny individualists, and the picketing of the magazine plant is a natural though ludicrous result.

* * * *

Mr. Upton Sinclair was the only one who offered any concrete encouragement to the craft, and his proposal was not exactly the dawn of a bright tomorrow. When Mr. Sinclair was running for Governor of California on a platform of dried apples for dancing lessons he encountered a skeptic in Mr. Will Johnstone, the World-Telegram cartoonist, who was covering the campaign.

"What about me under this Epic plan?" Mr. Johnstone inquired cautiously. "Suppose I've got a picture of the Tammany Tiger and I need a pair of shoes."

The good Mahatma Sinclair popped up in bed, pulling his topcoat over his cold, thin shanks, and answered brightly:

"That has been all thought out," he said. "We have a sculptress in our ranks. Last week she sculped a bust of a farmer, and he gave her a peck of peaches.

Even among the highly successful members of the trade the sense of humor sometimes plays curious tricks, comparable to the solemn picketing of a magazine office in a demand for union recognition. The political cartoonist is a rare creature nowadays, and there are only two humorists among the few survivors. These are Ding and Talburt, but Ding suddenly broke off to take a bureau job in Washington to dedicate himself to the preservation of American wild life. The experience seems to have been disappointing, for he finally abandoned boon-duckling to resume a weapon more deadly in his hands than the mimeograph ever could be.

Some years ago many of the comic drawings published in various American weeklies contained, after the artists names, the legend "plus A. C." This meant that the idea had been furnished by a humorist's stooge named Arthur Crawford. Mr. Crawford had a gloomy, dusty little office downtown in which he would sit and be funny all day long, all by himself, on a percentage basis. He was, in the matter of quantity production, the most successful humorist of his time, and his mirth covered America for years. But the grind was too awful, and one day "plus A. C." was found in a little hotel room dead by his own hand.

Bitten by Insect, Man Dies of Arm Infection

Corley G. Landey, 22, 1603 A street southeast, died in Gallinger Hospital yesterday from a blood infection said to have been caused by an insect bite.

Landy was hospitalized after he complained of a pain in his arm. The wound had caused his arm to swell. Physicians said the bite might have been that of a black widow spider.

Landy said he could not remember having been bitten or having injured himself in any way. Acting Coroner Cristopher J. Murphy will perform an autopsy today.

Philadelphia Carnival

Mummers (Or Shooters) Will Stage Mammoth Parade Wednesday In Honor And Perhaps Burlesque Of Democrats.

By Eugene Pharo.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Philidelphia.

WHEN THE Democratic delegates gather in Philadelphia this week to nominate the man they think will be the next President, they will witness a large scale satire on both major political parties, based on an ancient custom that, so far as known, has been kept alive as an annual event only in Philadelphia. That is, the New Year's Shooters Association, which has maintained the only American event remotely related to New Orleans' Mardi Gras, will put on a mocking show that is expected to turn Wednesday night, June 24, into a carnival of a very special sort. Those in charge believe it will outpoint even the Mardi Gras.

A forecast was given the writer recently by George B. McClernand, jr., a South Philadelphia florist, who is president and director of the Association of Shooters, or Mummers. He talked about current plans and arrangements, but without violating the Mummers' custom of keeping the exact details of their spectacle secret until they burst on the world in their full glory. A little delving into the archives of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, besides, has turned up some of the traditional background, with most of which, paradoxically enough, the Shooters themselves are unacquainted.

Mr. McClernand's historical sense is alive to the extent that he knows one club dates back 60 years, and that Philadelphia mumming is based on "a tradition of our forefathers." He is also heart and soul behind the business of keeping the custom alive, but he hasn't had time to follow it all the way back to England, where it has been directly related by Philadelphia historians to the institution of Christmas mumming, and the reign of King of Misrule, under whose sway, up to the seventeenth century, the inhabitants, during Christmas week and at the turn of the year, performed masques, and levied tributes of cakes, ale and other gifts, known as a "dole."

Political Peccadilloes To Be Painted In Parade.

WITHOUT BEING aware of the historical niceties, the director of the association, and those working with him, are planning, under the watchful eye of Mayor S. Davis Wilson himself, to present such a dish of political banter, based on both Republican and Democratic peccadilloes, as will, in the opinion of Mr. McClernand, bring greater reputation to the Mummers than they have achieved through all their prancing and cavorting on many frigid New Year's Days.

Satire, or burlesque, of events of topical importance has been a characteristic of the Philadelphia New Year's parade ever since the various clubs and associations were got together in 1901 to make common cause. Before that the same spirit was manifested in districts and neighborhood parades and carryings-on that extend back into the mists of colonial days. In these, each club, originally executing little skits, or comic plays, carried pistols with which to shoot out the old year. They put on their acts individually, and in a jealous exclusiveness similar to the rivalry of old-fashioned volunteer fire companies, and which was accentuated when merchants, awakening to their opportunities, began to offer prizes for costumes and novelties.

In this year's New Year's parade, and those of recent years, there has been little to criticize, except by captious esthetes whose tastes are too refined to appreciate ash-cart wit, or who fail to warm to the rude and hearty humor of stevedores and truck drivers. Two topics were specially ruled out of this year's burlesques in January by Mr. McClernand, who keeps in touch with the plans of all clubs. They were politics and the Ethiopian situation—the latter chiefly because the part of town in which nearly all the clubs have their headquarters adjoins a heavily populated Negro belt as well as an Italian one.

This week, however, at the direct suggestion of the mayor, the clubs will go to bat over the political situation, and in a big way.

G. O. P. Will Feel Jibes As Much As New Deal.

"WE INTEND," says Mr. McClernand, "to burlesque the Republicans and the national Administration, but in such a way as to get humor out of it; not to hurt anybody's feelings, but to liven up the parade. We are sure that the delegates will see the point, and will appreciate what we do and enter into the spirit of it."

Included among the organizations charged with this feat are 16 string bands, five "fancy" clubs and four "comics." Their membership is about 12,000 persons, living mostly in a section of South Philadelphia bounded roughly by South street and Oregon avenue, Front street and Broad. When the parade is held, this number is augmented by former members who return to the city to participate in the shenanigans.

Of the existing organizations, the Silver Crown, organized in 1876, is the granddaddy. Several others were formed at about the same period, and of recent years others have been added. The "fancy" department is favored by the older associations, which devote months to the fabrication of one huge costume that is then worn by the members of the whole group. It is usually in the form of a cape, of monstrous size and elaborate inutility. A husky dignitary walks at the middle of it, and dozens of associates carry the various points and wings, while Philadelphians and visitors look down from every vantage point in order to admire the fantastic wonder of it.

The "comics" go in for burlesque, such as a lampoon this year of a debate between State authorities and historical societies, over whether hot dogs should be sold at Valley Forge, or a series of mimes exemplifying current conditions. One club devoted its activities this January to a continuous exhibition of cops beating up thugs.

Then there are the beautiful ladies—all of them male—and some of them so extremely decollete that every winter there is an aftermath of grippe and even pneumonia when the affair is over.

Warm Weather Will Allow New Stunts.

NONE of this is to be taken as indicating exactly what the world will see during the convention, however, for with the weather milder, and the inspiration of so momentous an occasion and of a vast crowd of onlookers, various innovations both odd and startling are to be introduced. The verve and spirit of the dancing paraders, each club being ministered to by its own band; the drolleries of the individual freaks and comical contestants; the audacity of their costuming and their lampoons of the great and the near-great, can, however, be counted upon.

"We don't want it to affect the tradition of our regular parade," he said, "but this is different. There will be lots of merrymaking and confetti, and the weather conditions will permit a great deal more of the carnival kind of thing."

The city is not being asked to meet the expense, which will run to more than $20,000. The money is expected to come from hotel and restaurant proprietors and other businessmen. Members of the clubs themselves have a variety of expenses to meet, but the means of doing that have been perfected as a result of their preparation for the annual parade. Boat rides, dances, excursions, radio games and a variety of other affairs for money-making purposes are sponsored by the clubs throughout the year. Those associated with the Mummers do not consider the custom to be by any means a one-day affair; they live with it constantly.

In spite of the fact that no parade was held in 1933 and 1934, because there was no city appropriation for the prizes that were established in 1901 to persuade all the clubs to come together for one mass parade, the director reports that the custom is "more solid" at present than it has ever been; the spirit is greater, and the competition keener. The Democratic convention is expected to do wonders for the association, just as the Mummers are arranging to do wonders for the convention—unless, of course, the parade and carnival are so very successful that the delegates, as a result of confronting it in conjunction with campaign oratory, laugh themselves to death.

Eclipse Photography Success, Soviet Says

Moscow, June 21 (AP).—An abundance of excellent photographs obtained during the total eclipse of the sun Friday will permit a thorough study of the physical peculiarities of the chromosphere, or sun's atmosphere, Soviet scientists reported today.

The Italian Academy of Science's expedition to Sara reported a group of spots was clearly discernible on the eastern extremity of the moon's disc while it covered the sun. The corona was bright with long, flame-like projections.

The eclipse cut off radio transmission to Kamchatka peninsula for two hours.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

An Open Letter.

Dear Governor Landon:

Just as a spectator and without implying that you will necessarily get my vote, may I offer you a little advice about your campaign? First of all, don't let anybody tell you that you ought to try to match Mr. Roosevelt as a radio voice or screen personality. You were not chosen as one of the brilliant personalities or sweet voices of America. There are many more colorful leaders. But the thing to bear in mind is that this is a national crisis, not a Miss America contest; a national election, not a screen test.

What you want to bear in mind, Alfred, is that Mr. Roosevelt has the best radio voice in America, not even excluding Uncle Don; that as a screen personality he is a natural and that there is no sense trying to compete with him as a showman. Your chance rests in presenting yourself as a homespun, fairly modest, plain, every-day American who doesn't think into a microphone and whose deliberations are not dependent on acoustics.

As I see it, Alf, the issue, broadly speaking, this November will be the people's preference between the careful thinking, slow-speaking, word-choosing type of American who wants to be sure he doesn't fool anybody, and the impetuous, silver-tongued type of American who is always right.

Your appeal to the imagination must be almost wholly that of a self-made, ruggedly honest American from out West where men are men, where governors are economical and where Presidential candidates are reliable bookkeepers.

What this country needs as much as anything else is an immediate suspension of the tendency to giggle whenever it is said of any public man that his word is as good as his bond, Alf, and that is where you can help.

You're facing a hard fight and the odds are against you. It is human nature to react sweetly to rainbows, bubbles and free distribution of circus tickets. Your job is to see if any great number of Americans any longer believe in hard facts, realities and the old adage that nothing you get out of a silk hat is a bargain. Personally I doubt that there are, but it will be worth finding out.

Yours truly,
ELMER TWITCHELL.

"Ah, Wilderness"

By William Lyon Phelps.

British Opening.

This charming comedy by Eugene O'Neill, which, glorified by the acting of George M. Cohan, had a long run on the metropolitan stage and then on the road, and was with almost equal success transferred to the screen, made its first appearance in England last month. The London Spectator, fortunate in having as regular drama critic the accomplished Derek Verschoyle, had an interesting review of the play in its issue for May 8.

The article opens with the recognition of O'Neill as America's leading dramatist, because of the originality and experimental nature of his plays.

The peculiar merit of Mr. O'Neill, in a theater musclebound with stale theatrical devices and jaded themes, has always been his willingness to experiment and his adventurous search for new dramatic material. The contribution which he has made to the modern theatre has not been equalled by any of his contemporaries either in scope or in variety. In the course of more than a dozen plays he has shown himself by turns, and with almost consistent success, a bitter realist, a tragedian, a grim humorist, a satirist, a classicist, a romantic, a prophet, a symbolist, an antinomian, a fantastic. . . .

Then, in turn to "Ah Wilderness!" Mr. Verschoyle says, truly enough, that "it is the first play written by Mr. O'Neill which might equally well be the work of any one of about six other competent American dramatists."

* * * *

This sentence is particularly interesting, both because it definitely places O'Neill in a class by himself, and at the same time recognizes (which could not have been the case 20 years ago) six other competent American playwrights—shall we say Sidney Howard, Robert Sherwood, Philip Barry, Maxwell Anderson, Mare Connelly, George S. Kaufman—and still there are others.

Mr. Verschoyle on the whole is disappointed in Mr. O'Neill's comedy because it seems to him only a well-made play, without any spark of originality. But I think, with all due respect, if he had been an American, he would have liked it better. I do not think any native of another country could really fully appreciate "Ah, Wilderness!" which is wholly American.

Military Pact Provisions Set By Britain, Italy

Accord on Mediterranean Held Major Factor in Sanctions Action.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, June 21.—Great Britain and Italy have reached an agreement in principle on the main points of a Mediterranean military accord, army circles said today.

This projected accord was a powerful inducement leading Great Britain to the decision to lift sanctions, these sources added, and was one of the main reasons for an improvement in relations between the two countries.

Main points of the proposed agreement regulating British and Italian sea, air, and land forces in the Mediterranean are:

1. British naval supremacy remains assured. The Italian fleet would be divided into three large units or squadrons, only one of which would be stationed near waters that might interest Britain, the other two in the upper Adriatic.

2. Italy would have the superior air position. She would keep permanently about 100 planes in Libya and another 100 would be divided between Sicily and the Aegean Islands.

3. Land forces in Egypt and Libya would be limited to 75,000 men by each country, of which one-third would be motorized.

4. The British may fortify Cyprus and Alexandia in addition to Malta.

Warning by Il Duce.

Premier Mussolini declared today Italy could take care of those nations "crazy with the heat."

Addressing the colorful Bersaglieri troops in the Venezia Square, Il Duce asserted he knows "what the armed forces of all Italians can do if those who have been called crazy with the heat will not be brought back to reason or at least reduced to impotence."

His phrase, "crazy with the heat," echoed that of the press recently in referring to ultra-sanctionists who demand a continuance of sanctions.

The Bersaglieri soldiers, wearing black hats with drooping rooster feathers, celebrated the 100th anniversary of their formation and honored the memory to King Carol Alberto of Sardinia.

Germany Seeks Role.

Berlin, June 21 (AP).—German diplomacy hopes to nose out France as a mediator between Britain and Italy.

Nobody will admit this officially, but circumstantial evidence as well as information obtained privately in the Wilhelmstrasse and in foreign embassies all point that way.

German diplomacy, diplomats said, has been quietly spreading the idea that "radical" France, headed by a Letfist government, has joined the list of "bolshevist-infested" nations.

Great Britain and Italy, both opponents of communism—so the thesis runs—should get together and, with Germany, and possibly Poland, preserve European civilization from what was described as cultural and political debacle.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, Adolf Hitler's personal ambassador extraordinary, is seriously considering accepting the post of German Ambassador to the Court of St. James, officials said.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's recent definite bid for an understanding between France, Germany and Great Britain was said to have overcome Von Ribbentrop's early misgivings about abandonnig a general commission in favor of a specific mission.

In London, it was added, Von Ribbentrop hopes not only to come to terms with Baldwin, but also to play the role of mediator between Italy and Britain.

Informed circles said Germany hopes to profit from the Anglo-Italian situation by establishing herself as the mediator, the great exponent of peace, and as the "savior" of Europe from bolshevism.

If it be true the Germans want to play the role of peacemakers in Europe, observers here say, it is equally apparent Premier Mussolini hopes to play off the Germans against his friends from the Stresa front—France and Great Britain.

Political observers doubt whether Il Duce cares to have his dictator-colleague, Hitler, emerge as mediator. Outwardly, however, both official Germany and official Italy are displaying signs of a hearty new friendship.

Conference ... Montreux.

By the Associated Press.

Montreux, Switzerland, June 21.—An international conference opening here tomorrow to discuss Turkey's request to fortify the Dardanelles will be turned into a general discussion of military and naval problems of the Mediterranean, officials said tonight.

Great Britain, they added, is expected to ask a continuance of the mutual assistance guarantees given her by France, Yugoslavia, Greece, and Turkey against Italy under the regime of sanctions.

What may come after Turkey gets her permission worries France.

French delegates are instructed to "stall off" a decision on Britain's request, officials said. They feared France would further alienate Italy if she favored a continuance of the guarantees and anger Great Britain if she refused.

The conference will tackle the revision of the Straits convention which was signed at Lausanne in 1923 between Turkey and the powers who were allies during the World War.

The Straits convention prohibits Turkey from fortifying the Dardanelles and establishes zones of demilitarization for the whole Straits region, which includes the Dardanelles, the Sea of Mormora, and the Bosphorus.

Built-In Dresser, Shelves Save Space

A city apartment with a small bedroom which is furnished in modern style may conserve space by having the dressing table and chests of drawers built in. A smart New York apartment is decorated in this fashion, a small room might benefit by this suggestion.

A shelf across one wall serves as a dressing table. An unframed mirror hangs above. The bench, when not in use, may be put under the shelf. Two chests of drawers are built in.

New Soviet Constitution Aims To Extend Equality of Classes

Farmer Put on Political Par With City Worker, Nobility Stigma Eased; Texts Distributed to Prepare for Adoption.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, June 21.—An advance of utmost importance in the Soviet scheme of developing "democracy"—extension of the principles of equality—has been announced by the Kremlin.

It goes far toward removing the "stigma" of origin in the old "privileged" classes and gives the farmer equal political rights with the industrial worker, eliminating a disparity which has prevailed since the revolution.

Nation-wide discussion of the new constitution as a preliminary to its adoption at a November session of the all-union congress of Soviets started following the distribution of copies of the text by all available means of transport.

Thousands of copies were dropped at isolated points, especially in the far north, by airplanes. Tens of millions of farmers and industrial workers of both sexes are taking part in the discussions, which were organized on collective farms and in factories and clubs.

The official press, picking up suggestions from various parts of the country, published an article advising caution in the extension of equal suffrage to the clergy, the former nobility and others of the former "privileged" classes.

Summed up in the new constitution, the changes depict what the Stalinists say is a systematic growth through Socialism and Democracy toward Communism—always the ultimate goal.

The constitution will replace a ten-year-old document put into force at a time when, the Bolshevists say, conditions demanded rules of inequality.

Under the old constitution rural populations could elect only one delegate to congress for every five elected by city workers. And until now origin in the privileged classes—that is the merchant, landowner or nobility classes—was hard to live down.

All members of society with the exception of persons disfranchised by the courts are guaranteed rights of equal suffrage by the new charter, including former princes, former merchants, former kulaks and members of the clergy.

The forthcoming congressional session will be the last dominated by the city workers. And it will be the last to which delegates will be appointed by the Soviets or people's boards. Hereafter the division will be equal and delegates will be elected in direct, secret voting.

State socialism and "Soviet democracy" are regarded by the Stalinists as mere transitory periods in building communism. When communism comes the state as an organ of compulsion will disappear. The Stalinists admit that communism is not yet within reach.

The official press has explained that widening of individual rights has become possible because class lines are vanishing. It warned, however, that they have not entirely disappeared and that vigilanee must continue to be a watchword.

Among other things it stated so clearly as to remove any possibility of doubt was that the government, for the moment, will not bury the big stick. The "remnants" of opposition, it said, are still a factor to be dealt with and so long as it is necessary the government will use measures of oppression.

Figures cited to show that rapid progress has been made disclose that only 5 per cent of trade remained in private hands in 1930 and since then private capital has been eliminated.

Individual farmers control only 3 per cent of the total sowing area of Soviet farmlands. All the rest has been "collectivized" or transformed into state farms which means that individuals can be practically excluded as land owners in the Soviet Union today.

Steel Bid Action Asked

suggest to Congress the enacting of legislation aimed specifically at delivered-price systems "that frustrate price competition," and that all Government purchasing officials be requested to collect and furnish evidence regarding cases of identical bids on various commodities.

In this connection, one paragraph in the President's letter to the Attorney General, read:

"Will you be good enough to prepare for me the necessary letters to purchasing agents to be sent out by me at once, and also to prepare a draft of recommendations to the Congress at its next session?"

The commission went into the matter of the basing point price system on steel sheet piling, saying it is "in essence a single basing point system over large areas, with Pittsburgh governing most of the eastern section of the country, and Chicago governing most of the west."

"When mills in one area sell into the area governed by another basing point," the report continued, "they must abide by the price of the other basing point, even though it is higher than their own. This requirement applies to Pittsburgh, when selling piling in the higher price territories governed by Chicago and Buffalo."

It said that identity of delivered prices is preserved to fractions of a tenth of a cent "by elaborate formulae" and said that in one case a bidder was 12 cents below his competitors on a $80,000 Government order because he carried out the delivered price to three decimal places instead of two.

Unable to Get Data.

"As a matter of public policy it cannot be admitted that prices collusively determined in violation of law might conceivably be fair and reasonable."

The commission said it had endeavored to determine for the President whether there had been dumping of German steel piling here at less than prices charged in Germany, but was unable to obtain, either through American consular officials or from American piling producers, the data necessary for a definite answer.

The report made reference to Secretary Ickes' recent testimony before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee that during the nine months subsequent to the NRA codes, his department had received identical bids on 48 different commodities and in 257 instances, and that as a result "the Federal statute requiring that awards be made on the basis of competitive bids, has been nullified."

Only last week Secretary Ickes had another brush with a steel company when he canceled a $40,000 order given the Jones & Laughlin Co. at the request of the National Labor Relations Board, which reported the steel company had violated orders of the board.

"When discovered," the commission statement said, "such loopholes were stopped by special provisions."

In answer to the President's inquiry whether the prices submitted in the three cases investigated were "fair and reasonable," the commission said an affirmative answer could not be given. It set out several reasons for its position and then stated:

5 Inquiries Begun In Fall of Building

New York, June 21 (AP).—Five official investigations were in process tonight to establish the cause of the collapse of a Bronx apartment house under construction in which 16 workmen were hurled to death in a jumble of timbers, bricks and mortar.

Bronx District Attorney Samuel J. Foley announced he had ordered 25 laborers who sifted the debris for bodies to appear in his offices tomorrow to make sworn accounts of their observations.

Any evidence of negligence would be presented to the Bronx grand jury on Tuesday, he said.

The police, fire, Bronx building and State labor departments began separate investigations to fix responsibility for the tragedy. Two men who had been assigned to examine the apartment house prior to the collapse were suspended, but Patrick J. Reville, Bronx commissioner of buildings, said this had been done as "a matter of course."

Indirect Lighting Enhances Garden

Lighting effects are now being installed in many private gardens, so that they may be enjoyed both day and evening. Such effects should be well concealed and the source of the light should be out of view.

A beam thrown on a particularly lovely flowering bush, or group of flowers, or on a statue over a pool, make delightful pictures from the house windows.

It should not be overdone, however, for gardens should retain their intimate feeling and avoid the character of public amusement parks, so no attempt should be made at general illumination. Lights should be so arranged that the various parts of the garden can be illuminated in their loveliest season.

Blend Garden Furniture Paint With Background

Remember, when you select a color scheme for your garden furniture, that you can paint the furniture so that it draws attention to itself, or coat it so that it harmonizes with the background and does not detract from your flowers. If you wish colors that will blend with the background, you'll find that a combination of Hunter's green and deep brown is effective.

William Crisp, Leader In Anne Arundel, Dies

Brooklyn Park, Md., June 21 (AP).—William N. Crisp, business and Democratic leader in northern Anne Arundel County, died in his sleep early today at his home a few hours after he had finished his work as chief census enumerator in southern Maryland.

He concluded his work yesterday and went on a fishing trip with his son, William. After returning home, he complained of indigestion and went to bed. His wife found his body this morning.

He was a charter member of the composite Lodge of Masons and also belonged to the Odd Fellows, the Red Men, and the Methodist Protestant Church. He is survived by his wife and son and a daughter, Miss Elizabeth Hopkins Crisp.

Funeral services will be held at his home on Wednesday. The Rev. Carroll Maddox will officiate.

Blum Protests British Paper's 'Unrest' Report

'France and Belgium Going Red,' Headlines in Dispatch Assert.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 21.—Leon Blum, premier of the new Leftist government, protested today an English newspaper's report of uprisings in France and the headline: "France and Belgium are rapidly going red."

Blum, in a statement, said "an English Sunday newspaper (Dispatch) printed this morning a front page, seven-column headline saying: 'France and Belgium are rapidly going red; scenes of horror, rioting, bloodshed and misery; strikers' excesses—tourists in fear of their lives.'

"The French government can not allow such gross untruths to be published in a friendly country without immediately raising categorical protests. Neither scenes of horror nor of violence took place in Paris in recent weeks.

"There has been no uprising in France.

"The French government is convinced such a perversion of language will find nowhere judges more severe than those in Great Britain."

(The Sunday Dispatch asserted "red terrorism is sweeping across Europe—Spain, then France and now Belgium."

(The Dispatch, owned by Lord Rothermere, is strongly isolationist in its policy.

(The newspaper asserted, "In these three countries business is in ruins, home life is a mockery and moral degradation is taking a stranglehold on the people. From all parts of France and Belgium come reports of debauchery, drunkenness and vice so horrible no newspaper would dare print them."

(This account was followed by a dispatch from the Paris correspondent dealing chiefly with "horrible stories of orgies and uncontrolled vice" among the strikers in France who occupied stores and factories, "despite the attempted segregation of thousands of workers of both sexes.")

N. C. Man Is Killed In Roller Coaster Fall

Norfolk, Va., June 21 (AP).—Curtis C. Higgins, 35, of Roanoke Rapids, N. C., was fatally injured in a 40-foot plunge from a roller coaster at Ocean View, local beach resort, this afternoon.

Witnesses told police investigators that Higgins stood up as the roller coaster car in which he was riding was taking a curve at high speed. The swing of the car on the curve toppled him over, and he fell head first to the ground. He died in a Norfolk hospital about two hours after the accident.

at Marseille, Bordeaux and elsewhere in the provinces.

The demonstration coincided with an intensification of the government's campaign to dissolve Rightist leagues.

After a conference with Premier Blum and other ministers, Roger Salengro, minister of the interior, directed new instructions to police urging a stricter surveillance of Rightist meeting places and the suppression of all assemblies and demonstrations.

Col. De La Rocque asserted: "The Croix de Feu movement learns from certain sources a provocative plot has been organized, leading to grave events in Paris and provinces for which it is to be blamed."

He directed his followers to remain at their homes to await further orders.

Minor disorders developed in Paris and the provinces. Young Rightists singing the "Marseillaise" encountered Leftists singing the "Internationale" here. Police halted a scuffle. Other quarrels involved vendors of rival Rightist and Leftist newspapers.

Rightists called their tricolor demonstration "a natural reply to political agitation carried on more than a month by professional strikers."

Salengro, after night-long conferences, settled the Paris department store strike. Some 26,000 employes started an evacuation of buildings held for 18 days and agreed to return to work tomorrow.

The accord provided for a minimum wage scale, paid vacations, collective contracts and "disciplinary councils" in each store, comprising representatives of the workers and the employers, to decide disputes.

Only a few minor labor conflicts remained in the capital area, but the movement persisted in some places in the provinces.

Mgr. Dubourg, Bishop of Marseilles, reiterating the Pope's recent attacks on communism, appealed to Catholic workers of his city to join "Christian labor unions," which are separate from the Leftist General Federation of Labor.

Diplomat's Widow Pays Capital Visit

Lady Broderick Returns With Daughter After Five-Year Absence.

Will Attend Wedding of Her Son at Club Here Next Monday.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Lady Broderick, who lived in Washington from 1916 to 1930, when her husband, the later Sir John Broderick, was Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy, saw members of the diplomatic staffs come and go during her residence here but, returning after five years' absence, she is more than ever impressed with the rapidity of change in the Capital.

Her friends in residential society of Washington are still living here, although some have already left to spend the season at their summer homes. In the legations however, only the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, the Minister of Austria and Mme. Phochnik, the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro remain.

The Minister of Hungary and Mme. Pelenyi were here but Mr. Pelenyi was not at that time representing his country as minister. Only the Commercial Secretary and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart remain at the British Embassy.

To Attend Wedding.

Lady Broderick, who is accompanied on her visit from Ireland by her daughter, Miss Sheila, came to attend the wedding of Miss Kathryn Darling Rowland and her son, Mr. Maurice Broderick. The marriage, originally set for today, was postponed until next Monday because of illness in the family of the bride. Postponement of the date of the wedding has given Lady Broderick and her daughter a longer time in Washington, which has been welcomed by their friends. They are guests at the home of Miss Eleanor M. Connolly.

Although no formal entertaining has been done for Lady Broderick as Miss Connolly is in mourning, she has been the guest of friends at small and informal luncheons, teas and dinners.

Miss Sheila, who is now 15, is enjoying sightseeing in the Capital, visiting with new appreciation places which made little impression on her as a small child.

She was born in Washington and several of her mother's friends, on meeting her this time have told her of having been present at her christening. The ceremony was attended by many noted persons, among them M. Jules Jusserand, who was then Ambassador of France, and Mme. Jusserand.

Miss Sheila has auburn hair and blue eyes and is said to bear marked resemblance to her mother. She has been attending Loreto Abbey, Rathfarnham, outside of Dublin, and will return to Ireland with her mother on August 15, in time to resume her school work in the fall. She is a gifted linguist, speaking English, German, French, Spanish and Irish, which is a required subject in the schools of Ireland.

Sister to Arrive.

Lady Broderick's sister, Mrs. Frederick A. M. Tabor, will arrive from Cape Cod Saturday and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Broderick, will come from New York City, to be present at the wedding. The ceremony will be performed at 8 p. m. Monday in the Washington Club.

Lady Broderick and her daughter expect to accompany Mrs. Tabor on her return to Cape Cod and remain there until the time of their sailing for Ireland.

Sir John and Lady Broderick left Washington in 1930 when he was appointed Minister of Great Britain to Cuba. He later was ambassador designate to Argentine when he was taken ill and died in London before presenting his credentials.

THE WASHINGTON SCENE

By the Poe Sisters.

Senator and Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, of Wisconsin and their pretty 16-year-old daughter, Anne, will celebrate more than the opening of the Democratic Convention in Philadelphia tomorrow. It will be Senator Duffy's birthday as well.

Convention or no convention he will have his usual birthday party even though it may be held in Philadelphia this year instead of in Washington. Mrs. Duffy and Miss Duffy have attended to the arrangements for this observance and the Senator is due for some pleasant surprises on the forty-eighth anniversary of his birthday.

The Wisconsin Senator has had one of the most colorful careers in the upper house of Congress. His war years, which began with nine months duty on the Mexican border at Brownsville, Tex., had a romantic episode in his friendship with pretty Louise Haydon, of Kentucky, now Mrs. Duffy. Their marriage took place two months before Capt. Duffy went overseas.

His bride passed the 16 months of his absence in war service work in her community at Springfield, Ky. Senator Duffy was one of the early supporters of the American Legion and still maintains an active interest in this organization, having served as a State commander and as national vice commander.

Miss Anne Duffy has been appointed one of the honorary secretaries at the Democratic convention.

Apropos of the convention, two stanch Republican women, mother and daughter, have gone to Philadelphia to report the proceedings for their own newspaper in Illinois. Mrs. Albert G. Simms, formerly Representative Ruth Hanna McCormick, of Illinois, and her daughter, Mrs. Courtlandt Barnes, who was the popular Katrina McCormick, a debutante of several seasons ago, are there to "cover" the convention for the newspaper in Rockford owned by Mrs. Simms.

Mrs. Simms has been visiting her daughter at her country place at Middleburg, Va., since the close of the Cleveland convention. This charming country place is a rendezvous for the younger set of this vicinity. One of the chief attractions are the burros, being raised there.

Resident Washington read with interest the details of the wedding in New York on Saturday of James G. Blaine, grandson of James G. Blaine, nominee of the Republican Party for President in 1884 to Countess Irina Woronzow-Daschkow. The Blaine's big red brick house at Massachusetts avenue and Twentieth street is now headquarters of a New Deal agency, but in its day it was a social center of Washington and the scene of lavish entertaining. In the old days a picture of the colored nurse of the Blaine children was reproduced in a stained glass window. In this house also have lived Mr. and Mrs. George Pullman, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Lowden, when Mr. Lowden was a member of Congress. Among those at the wedding Saturday were the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, Mrs. Harriet Blaine Beale, aunt of Mr. Blaine and the first wife of Mr. Truxton Beale, who died recently, and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Auchincloss, of Washington.

The bride is the daughter of the late Peter Michael Lafaref, who was a member of the Council of the Empire in imperial Russia and an equerry to the late Czar. Her first husband died during the Russian revolution. The bridegroom and his first wife, the former Marion Dow, were divorced in Reno last November.

To Be Wed July 11

du Charme.

MRS. CAROLYN LOMBARDI McCORMICK, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Lombardi, of San Francisco, whose engagement to Mr. John D. Farnham, of this city, has been announced by her parents. Their marriage will take place in San Francisco July 11.

McCormick and Farnham Wedding Set

Marriage Ceremany Is Scheduled to Take Place July 11.

Bride-Elect Is Graduate of Bryn Mawr, Visited D. C. Recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Lombardi, of San Francisco, Calif., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Carolyn Lombardi McCormick, to Mr. John D. Farnham, of Washington, son of Mrs. Charles W. Farnham, of St. Paul Minn., and the late Mr. Farnham.

Mrs. McCormick attended Bryn Mawr College and was presented to society in San Francisco several years ago. Her first marriage to Mr. F. G. McCormick, of San Francisco, terminated in divorce. She is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin B. Barber, of Bethesda, Md., and was in Washington recently for the wedding of their daughter, Miss Janet Barber, to Dr. Samuel Drury.

Mr. Farnham attended Exeter Academy and was graduated from Harvard University in 1923 and from Harvard Law School in 1926. From 1928 to 1933 he was associated with the Rockefeller Bureau of Social Hygiene and for the past two years has been a member of the legal staff of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

His first marriage to the former Dr. Maryina Foot ended in divorce.

The wedding will take place July 11 at the home of Mrs. McCormick's parents in San Francisco. After their marriage Mr. Farnham and his bride will reside in Washington.

Daughter Is Born.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Humphries, 844 Delafield place, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, Merrie Jane, on Friday, June 12, at the Washington Sanitarium.

Jacqueline Green And Lieut. Greenlee Will Be Married

Mrs. Margaret F. Green announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Jacqueline Lee Green, to Lieut. Halford Robert Greenlee, jr., Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army.

Miss Green attended the Fredericksburg Women's College and is a member of the Alpha Phi Sigma honorary fraternity. Lieut. Greenlee, the son of Capt. and Mrs. Halford Robert Greenlee, United States Navy, attended the University of Maryland and is a member of the Theta Chi national social fraternity. He was graduated from the United States Military Academy in the class of 1935 and is now stationed at Fort Monroe, Va.

The wedding will take place in August.

Miss Catherine Toulotte To Become Bride Today

Miss Catherine A. Toulotte, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Toulotte, who will be married today at St. Charles Catholic Church, Clarendon, Va., to Dr. Stephen J. Karpenski, of Auburn, N. Y., will have as her maid of honor, Miss Emily May, and as her bridesmaids Miss Mary Katherine Moore, Miss Mary Ready, and Miss Margaret Wagner.

Dr. John K. Karpenski will be his brother's best man. The ushers will include Mr. Burtin Toulotte and Mr. Albert Toulotte, brothers of the bride, and Mr. Joseph Healy.

Miss Harley to Be Wed.

Invitations have been issued by Mrs. Charles Joseph Harley, of Round Hill, for the wedding of her daughter, Miss Dorothy James Harley, to Mr. Francis Hamilton Haile, June 30 in the Round Hill Baptist Church.

Mrs. Victor Zelov Leaves Washington For Philadelphia

Mrs. Victor Zelov, who has been spending some time in Washington with her mother, Mrs. Randolph Dickinson Hopkins, has returned to her home near Philadelphia. Later in the week Mr. and Mrs. Zelov will entertain a house party of friends attending the Democratic convention.

Mr. Vladimir Yourkevitch, of Paris, designer of the French liner Normandie, who was with them in Washington, will be a guest at the house party. Mr. Yourkevitch and Mr. Zelov were classmates at the College of Peter the Great, University of Petrograd.

Miss Kuhmerker Mr. Messinger Wed

Couple Leaves for Trip in New England.

The marriage of Miss Marie D. Kuhmerker, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Max Kuhmerker, to Mr. Henry Messinger, son of Mrs. Lewis Messinger and the late Mr. Messinger, took place at noon yesterday at the home of the bride's parents in the Embassy Apartments. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate family by the Rev. Norman Gerstenfeld.

The bride was unattended. Mr. Messinger had as his best man his brother, Mr. Bernard Messinger, of Cleveland.

The couple left for a motor trip through New England and Canada and will reside in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Droop sailed early in June on the Europa. They expect to spend the greater part of the summer in Europe, and on their return will open their summer home in Virginia.

60 Here to Sail On Queen Mary

Mrs. Waters Heads Local Party Off Tomorrow for New York.

A party of 60 Washingtonians will leave tomorrow night on the Queen Mary Special for New York, where the group will sail Wednesday morning aboard the Queen Mary for Europe.

Mrs. Laura Waters will head the Washington party, which will visit Ireland, England, France, Denmark, Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Austria and Italy.

Most of the party will return in August, but Mrs. Waters will continue to Russia, where she will spend a month touring the interior. She will return September 9 on the Aquitania.

Among those who are sailing are: Mrs. V. P. Weems and Miss Virginia Weems, wife and daughter of Commander Weems, of Annapolis; Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Barbour, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Van Buren, Mrs. Wilbur Payne, Mrs. E. K. Fulton, Mrs. Eugenia Osborne, Mrs. George Phillips, Mrs. Winifred Handy, Miss Jean Handy, Miss Ann Blonder, Miss Mary Searles, Miss Virginia Read, Miss Mildred Millert, Miss Maud Proctor, Miss Elizabeth Newton, Miss Freida Thomas, Miss Mary Robinson, Miss Mildred Kerr, Miss Helen Spencer, Miss Matilda Smith, Miss Blanche Faine, Miss Ruth Morley, Miss Daisy Reed, Miss Elizabeth Mall, Miss Mary V. Fulton, Miss Mary E. Curran, Miss Mildred Lawlor, Mr. John C. Crockett, Mr. Frederick C. Winn, Mr. William Morley and Mr. Cassius Hunt.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Deaver, of 2726 Brandywine street, accompanied by Miss Lola M. Williams, of the Argonne, are spending a few days in New York and are staying at the Hotel New Weston.

Col. and Mrs. Spencer Crosby, of Washington, and Mrs. E. Brooke Lee, of Llewellyn Fields, Rockville, Md., are among the guests at the St. Regis in New York.

G. R. Thompson Wed at Takoma

Miss Edith Kronenbitter Is Bride in Ceremony at Takoma Church.

Miss Edith Katherine Kronenbitter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Kronenbitter, of Silver Spring, Md., and Mr. George Ray Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Thompson, also of Silver Spring, were married at 3:30 p. m. yesterday at the Takoma Lutheran Church, the Rev. J. A. Pfeiffer officiating. The wedding music was played by Mrs. C. E. Baus, of Washington, at the organ, and her husband sang 'O Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly." Spring flowers and ferns decorated the altar.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of white silk crepe was made on long lines with a packet, full in the back and with long, full sleeves. Her long net veil was arranged in cap style and she carried calla lilies.

Mrs. Elsa Fletcher, of New York and Boston, the bride's aunt, was her matron of honor. She wore a gown of pale green lace with a light brown picture hat and accessories and carried talisman roses.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Stanley Olman and Miss Dorothy Alexander. The former wore pink lace with a white tulle turban and carried lavendar sweet peas and lilies of the valley, and the latter wore lavender lace with a white tulle turban. Her bouquet was of sweet peas and lilies of the valley.

The best man was Mr. Wallace Long, of Staunton, Va., and the ushers, Mr. Claude Duvall, of Silver Spring, cousin of the bridegroom, and Mr. Chester Brenneman, of Takoma Park.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Oak street. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson left on a wedding trip. Mrs. Thompson's traveling costume was a tailored silk navy blue frock with white polka dots, and a small hat and other accessories in white. They will return to reside in Silver Spring.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included the bride's grandfather, Mr. Fred Kronenbitter, of New York; her younger sister, Miss Elsa Kronenbitter; Miss Louise Lillish, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Klesse and Mr. Klesse's mother, Mrs. Pauline Klesse, of New York; Mrs. L. Antonine, of Forest Hills, Long Island; Miss Elma Main, of Tekonsha, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lillish, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and Mrs. Mary Greas, of Jamaica, Long Island.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

CHAPTER TWELVE.

AFTER IRIS and Philip had slipped through into the great hall, Iris turned, and opening the door which her husband had just closed, she stood still, listening with a finger laid on her lips.

Meanwhile Philip was looking at her uneasily. It was so seldom that his wife showed real emotion.

At last she closed the door. "I thought I had heard steps on the tower staircase, and if I did, they could only have been those of Ruth Starling."

"I'm sure that was only your fancy. I have sharper ears than yours."

There followed a pause. "Well?" he said searchingly.

"What I said when we got out of your aunt's car is the literal truth. John Pendervil is crazy about that American girl——"

She waited a moment before she added: "I know the signs——"

"I bet you do, darling!" and he looked relieved.

"It's nothing to laugh about, Phil. If you'd been there, you'd have seen it as quickly as I did. It was a case of love at first sight—what the French call 'the clap of thunder.'"

Iris Proposes Plan.

"Listen, Phil! John carried her off the very minute we had arrived. He took her all around the house, and even showed her his workshop. For a solid hour, while your aunt worried me as a terrier worries a rat, she was alone with him. And then, when 5 o'clock struck, and tea was brought out, the couple had to be looked for here, there and everywhere before they were found."

Iris stopped out of breath. She seldom spoke for as long as that to anybody—least of all to her husband.

"The old vixen was even quicker than I was to see what had happened; and now she has actually asked Ruth Starling to stay at the manor house for a gay week-end to meet the American ambassador! Your aunt intends to get that girl for John, and she'll succeed, if we don't do something about it. I could see Ruth quite liked him, too."

"But what can we do about it, darling?"

"We can do a lot, and what's more, we have to do it at once."

"Do what?"

"Get through a call to London tomorrow morning, and lease that theater now. Fix the whole thing up in the next few days, and put the play that she's set her heart on in rehearsal." Her voice was trembling with excitement as she added, "I'll be ready to clear out of this place in one day if necessary!"

To her surprise and discomfiture her husband looked uncomfortable and undecided. Always—or almost always—Philip took her advice, and always he was wise to do so. Why was he hestitating now? Didn't he believe her?

Philip Urges Caution.

"I'd go slow for a bit, sweetheart. I would indeed. Surely there isn't any need for such damned hurry? In fact——"

"Yes?"

"——I can hardly believe you're right—I mean about John. And as for her——" he laughed aloud.

"I am right, Phil. Indeed, I am. The quicker we get away from here the better."

Again she threw him a veiled look of inquiry.

What was it he had in his mind? She knew it to be a tortuous mind and, as a matter of fact, she had been aware for some time—about a fortnight to be precise—that her husband had formed some scheme with regard to Ruth and her money he did not yet intend to reveal to her.

It made her feel nervous, for she could not help suspecting there was something in this secret plan both foolish and risky, too, as his schemes were all too apt to be.

To Go Boating.

Then suddenly she felt relieved. How stupid of her not to realize that what he was keeping secret had something to do with the purchase of the theater lease! With the help of the old money lender of whom she had always had an instinctive fear, he probably hoped to make some kind of illicit profit over and above what he stood in any case to gain, over this all-important business. And that she knew would be a very dangerous game to play with so shrewd a lawyer as Mr. Singleton.

She came back from her anxious thoughts and half-suspicions to hear him say, "Look here, childie! It isn't often that I say to you what you're a bit fond of saying to me."

"What's that?" she asked mechanically.

"'Bide a wee.' That's what I want you to do now."

He spoke with a decision most unusual on his part from him to her, and Iris said quietly, "All right, darling. We'll wait and see what happens."

And then he burst into a loud guffaw.

"To think of John Pendervil in love! And with that girl, when he might have had the pick of the London beauties—it's really too comic."

"Not at all comic—as I see it."

She looked away, feeling defeated. But even the commander of a lost battle must eat if he is to fight another day, so she turned, ready now to make her way to the kitchen quarters of the castle, there to deal with Lady Cicester's gift of four delicious birds.

"I say, pet! You might run up and tell our golden nugget that I'm at her service—I mean for the bathe."

"Going to take out the boat, Phil?"

"Yes, of course, darling. That girl can swim—I asked her this morning."

"I hope her heart's all right."

He took a quick step toward her. "What makes you say that?"

"Only because she told me she'd had rheumatic fever as a kid."

She waited a moment. "Look after her, dear. Don't let her overdo it after this hot day; she has all our goods on board."

Iris smiled her mysterious alluring smile, and suddenly Philip took her in his arms and kissed her with tender passion. "My poor darling love! What wouldn't I give to see you idling, and only doing what you wanted to do!"

"Being quite the lady, Phil? D'you remember that old charwoman who said to me, 'I knew her for quite a lady, ma'am, 'cause she did nothing all day long?' I should hate that."

"You wouldn't—if we had a yacht, and could go, on our own, all over the world together."

Shares Iris' Fears.

She put her arms around his neck, and their lips met in a long, clinging kiss. Philip Trefane might be, indeed he was, a heartless rogue—and more than that if the occasion served—but he worshiped his delicate, fragile wife. Body and soul, he was all hers, as she was all his. And he had felt sorry, a few minutes ago, to go against her wishes and advice. But he had done so, though she would never know it, for her own beloved sake, and that of their joint future. Even so, he had been far more affected and impressed by what his wife had noticed, than he had allowed her to see.

Before his marriage to Iris he had lived the life of an attractive man-about-town, in what his father would have called "fast London society," so he knew a good deal about sex, and the queer tricks Old Dame Nature will play every now and then with regard to a man and a maid. John Pendervil might be, and indeed was, abnormally ugly, but he was virile, intelligent, and unconventional. Also, he was just at that dangerous time of life when a man feels he is no longer young, and yet does not feel old.

What was more natural than that he should be violently attracted to a girl who, by an odd chance, shared his passion for the stage? Philip realized that Ruth might also attract Lord John for a very different reason—that she was so utterly different from the sort of English society girl who would be willing to marry an ogre, if that ogre happened to be a rich man, and must soon become a marquis—that is the next thing to a duke.

Philip Trefane, like his wife, was convinced that Ruth Starling, given the chance, would certainly accept an offer of marriage from such a man. She might make foolish conditions about going on with her theatrical venture, but that in the end she would, if given the chance, become Lady John Pendervil, and the marchioness of Cicester, did not, in his mind, admit of a doubt.

So he had realized the danger quite as clearly as had Iris, but whereas she was for running away, he had made up his mind, even in the few moments their talk had lasted, to counter the danger in a far simpler and swifter way than that suggested by his wife.

Cape Ensemble Combines Grace With Dash

The cape ensemble shown above represents the newest midsummer trend in fashions. It is suitable for any type of daytime engagement. Of baku sheer, it appears in such alluring color combinations as camelia with navy, aquamarine with black and warm gray with brilliant purple. Both two and three piece ensembles are offered in the cape effects. The contrasting shirtwaist front may be topped by a cape or the skirt blouse and cape may be separate. For information call The Post Fashion Editor, National 4200, Branch 323.

Fall Influence Already Affects Summer Styles

Cape - Suit Is Important Factor in Trend to Autumn Fashion.

By Ethel Ehlen.

IN SPITE of the torrid summer weather, there is a foretaste of autumn in the air—sartorially speaking! Hints and rumors of the fall influences have been quickly seized upon and transferred to summer fabrics. The smart woman can be decidedly "summertime" in her choice of midseason costumes and yet, if she is a careful shopper and up to whims of the mode, her wardrobe will reflect the fall trends.

The cape suit is one of these important trends. Considered newer and smarter, at the present, than the "jacketed" suit, capes have immediately found favor with the entire feminine world. And, this is not surprising, as "capes do have a way with them," an elusive swank that coats do not seem to possess. Besides being very chick, they swing loosely from the shoulders, promoting a maximum of coolness. The latest additions to the cape family, by their "umbrella" cut, emphasizes this wanted summer feature.

Sparkling color contrasts have been worked out in these dashing ensembles; elusive tones for cape and skirt and dark or unusual brilliant tones for the blouses, or shirtwaist fronts when the affair is a frock topped by a cape. A grand opportunity to match accessories to the contrasting accents, for that "oh, so different" type of outfit!

Unlike many other trends and vogues, capes can be worn by a woman of any height and weight with smart effect. For the short person, the cape gives dignity, and may even add an illusion of height to her figure. The tall person carries a cape on her shoulders with ultra-chic. And, whether slim or not so slim, the cape has a way of flattering the figure and giving a trim and swagger air to the wearer.

Short capes for evening have also made their appearance. These are of taffeta, satin or the popular cotton sheers. They add a bit of glamour to either a simple or pretentious evening frock, and perfectly complement both the sleek and bouffant types of gowns.

New Scents Bear Rustic Influence

The rustic influence is making itself felt in milady's newest perfumes. Bearing such rural names as "Odor of Earth," "New Cut Wood" and "Terre Sillonnee," these popular scents are the result of the discovery of special micro-organisms responsible for the pleasant smell of fresh-plowed fields in spring, of earth after rain in summer and of freshly felled trees, according to Dr. A. Raistrick, English scientist now working at the Rothamsted experimental station at Harpenden.

If these new perfumes catch the current feminine fancy, a definite field of "costume scents" is suggested by the possibility of propagating these organisms in pure culture and making use of their odors.

The GENTLER SEX . . .

By Malvina Lindsay.

Bride's Dowry.

"DID YOU EVER see so many perfectly wonderful things? I simply can't see where Grace is going to put 'em . . . with only an apartment——"

"I don't believe she's got as many as Betty Mooch . . . I know Betty got 27 cocktail shakers alone . . . Oh, I wish you'd look at that darling hand-painted salad bowl!"

"It IS sweet. Let's see who sent it. Adelaide Parrott! Well, of all things! With all her money I'd thought she'd sent something nicer."

"I'm dying to know what the Swanks sent . . . Oh, there it is, that silver tray . . . with the chrysanthemum border——"

"They always give silver trays . . . everybody says they buy 'em by the gross. She knows a man in the wholesale business——"

"Well, there's this much about a silver tray . . . it always shows up well . . . say, there's a cute salad bowl——"

"Let's see the card. Bess Close! Say! Do you know that bowl looks exactly like one I saw at Bess' wedding! You surely don't suppose——"

"Well, I don't know. I saw a cheese knife over there that is the exact image of one May Grabb got three years ago. Oh, there's some more berry spoons . . . that's 12 sets I've counted . . . still of course you can't have too many berry spoons——"

"They look to me like they're plated . . . whose card is that? Alice Waite's! Well I guess she figures it doesn't pay to spend too much on wedding presents . . . with as little chance as she has of ever getting 'em back—say, what on earth is that big wooden thing? It couldn't be a punch bowl!"

"It looks more like a washtub . . . Oh, no, it's a salad bowl! That's what it is! An EARLY MAYAN SALAD BOWL!"

"What are those funny things by it? They look like dried apples."

"Oh those are Eula Smart's Guatemalan portierres. Didn't you ever see them before. She always sends 'em. She's got a friend who gets 'em from a native tribe for $1.98 . . . You know in any store here you couldn't touch 'em for a cent less than $25."

"I'm simply dying to know what his Aunt Charlotte sent. They say she's got oodles of money . . . say look at this. Isn't it just too sweet? What do you suppose it is?"

"It looks like a cigar flicker . . . No, it couldn't be that. Well, whatever it is, it certainly is cute."

"Perfectly darling!"

"There's some more berry spoons . . . and some cheese knives . . . well, I suppose you never can have too many cheese knives . . . and look at those precious marshmallow tongs—say, I believe this is his Aunt Charlotte's present . . . no, it's from his office.

"A salad bowl set!"

"And solid silver!"

"Well, I suppose, after all, you can't have too many salad bowls . . . I wonder where they put my salad bowl . . . stuck it in some corner, I bet."

"I havn't see my cheese knife, either . . . it was perfectly darling . . . you know . . . different from most cheese knives——"

"Say, there's another mayonnaise set—that makes 11. Of course, though, you can't have too many mayonnaise sets—say isn't that a cute little trick?"

"It's a shoe horn! From Margie Rich!

"I bet it's solid silver . . . she always gives nice things. Say, there's another tea wagon. That makes eight. Betty Mooch only got seven."

"Look at those darling ice tongs! I wonder if they're plated . . . there's another home-made tapestry, that makes 14 . . . I wonder who sent all those original water colors . . . honestly, it looks as if Grace has got enough things to start right in housekeeping!"

"That's one thing about big weddings, they almost pay for themselves . . . Say! Here's his Aunt Charlottes present! Now, what on earth do you suppose that is?"

"It looks like a peanut roaster . . . no it's too big——"

"Oh, I tell you what it is! It's one of those new electric banana peelers!"

"And solid silver"

"Well, after all I suppose you can't have too many banana peelers."

Sensitivity Often Is Factor In 'Easy Crying' of Children

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

SOME CHILDREN cry easily long after they are old enough to know better. Here and there one may find that the overemotionalism or sensitivity is due to an actual physical condition. The child is really sick and should be cared for by a doctor. Or perhaps there is too great a nervous strain caused by tension or unrest in the family.

More often than not, however, it will turn out that the child merely has formed the habit of crying. For tears can be a habit—so can laughter. Perhaps the child was permitted to cry too much in babyhood. Many children are neglected by nurse or mother. To train a baby by letting him cry when he is merely seeking attention is one thing, but the parent must first be sure that it is attention the child wants.

Some children continue even after babyhood to cry for attention. They cry for every minor hurt, whether of their persons or of their feelings. When they are disappointed they burst into tears; if they are blamed or scolded, they seek sympathy by crying. It is generally girls who are the worst offenders in this line. It is contrary to tradition for boys to express emotion.

It would be a good thing if the tradition held for girls as well. The time is passing when they can hope to use tears as a weapon. The woman in business who cries, the wife who uses her tears to win an argument, are no longer in the ascendant.

Mince, Bounce, Heel, Waddle: Pick Your Type

If You Walk You Probably Are Guilty of One of Faults in List.

ARE YOU a "waddler," a "jumping jack" or a "hip switcher"?

If not, the chances are you are guilty of at least one of the 17 walking faults pointed out in the current issue of "Hygeia," the American Medical Association magazine.

As recently listed by the Associated Press, these tabooed types of walking are as follows:

"The Waddle," in which the walk is taken with the toes turned out.

"The Jumping Jack," a hop, skip and jump caused by overworked knee muscles.

"The Shoulder Sling," in which one foot turns out and twists the body.

"The Hip Swing," found in persons who have learned to prevent their toes from turning out without correcting the accompanying hip motion.

"The Caress," in which the walk is taken hesitatingly, usually in low heeled shoes.

"The Mince," in which the toe comes down first instead of the heel.

"The Bounce," which raises the walker high on his toes with each step.

"The Pound," in which the walker whacks his heels for emphasis.

"The Heel," common even in nice people. Same as the pound without the accent.

"The Rocking Chair," which rocks the walker back and forth with each step.

"The Peer," in which the head precedes the body.

"The Elevated Shoulder," just what it says, sometimes marked by a chip on the shoulder.

"The Kangaroo," with the upper part of the body thrown forward, putting the walker always in position for a spanking.

"The Settle," resorted to by the tall person who would rather not be conspicuous about it.

"The Roller Skate," in which the arms are held close to the sides and steps are short and mincing.

"The Dead Man's Walk," in which the upper part of the body, including the arms, is lifeless, and the feet shuffle along blindly.

All sorts of persons—not just politicians—are afflicted with these amusing gaits, the magazine said. The only proper way to take a walk is to keep the shoulders and pelvic girdle in line and hold the head back slightly.

Maternity Unit Urges Program

Ignorance and Indifference Held Cause of Most Childbirth Deaths.

Ignorance and indifference are the twin causes of the high mortality rate of mothers in the United States, according to the latest report of the Maternity Center Association of New York.

Pointing out that the United States stands exactly as it did a score of years ago with the maternal mortality rate more than twice as high as it should be, the report stresses that the lower death rates of mothers in certain European countries are caused by the provision of planned care for every expectant mother, regardless of whether she can afford to pay for it.

As a means of saving mothers' lives throughout the country and raising standards of care at birth until they at least approximate those of other civilized countries, the association advocates the following three-fold plan:

1. A thorough study of existing facilities to care for expectant mothers and the formulation of a plan of action which will remedy faults and supply services which are lacking.

2. Co-ordination of all health, social and recreational resources of community to meet the needs of each patient.

3. Provision of ample public funds to care for every expectant mother.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Encounters "Cut-In" System of Dancing for First Time With Humiliating Results.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: While my problem, if you can call it such, is trivial, it means much to me. The other night I came up against the "cut-in" system of dancing. I have picked up dancing as most girls do and can hold my own with other dancers. At least, that is what I thought until the other night. As you have probably guessed, I got "stuck" with one boy—my escort. He never introduced me to any other boys but one, so that may have had some bearing on the situation.

* * * *

Another couple had come with us and I danced with the other boy, but he was an awful dancer. The girl he brought was a good dancer. Now here is the trouble. She danced with the bad dancer and, of course, had to follow him, yet she was "cut in" on without introductions. I danced with my escort, who is a fairly good dancer, and wasn't "cut in" on.

* * * *

I am not a very pretty girl but I do know that I am just as attractive as the other girl. I was dressed as well if not better. I kept smiling and tried to be happy. I had done everything in the way of making myself immaculate; all those things you read about, such as mouth wash, deodorants, well manicured nails, which are important to a girl's popularity. So I conclude my dancing must have been the trouble. It is true that I hadn't danced for a long time, but I was able to follow the steps without stumbling. My escort was very frank in telling me that I was too stiff in the body but that my feet did all right. Can you imagine that—a stiff body and limber legs?

* * * *

I am sorry to trouble you with all this, but I thought you might be able to help me find the answer to my problem. I should like to know where I might go to take a short course in dancing, not too expensive. In fact, I will be frank and say I would like to take the shortest and cheapest course possible in the kind of dancing done at school and college affairs and at private homes. I can't afford to spend much and I don't have much time to give to such a class, either.

LILLIAN.

Secret of Grace.

DEAR LILLIAN: For $5 you can take a course of ten lessons in ballroom dancing at the local Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest. Classes are now recessed for the summer, however, but will be resumed the third week in October. It is possible you might get instruction equally low priced from local dancing academies. You might make inquiry by going through the list of such academies to be found in the classified section of the telephone directory.

* * * *

Your stiffness in dancing, while finding yourself adequate to following your partner's lead, was probably due to extreme self-consciousness. If you had been in a relaxed and genuinely happy frame of mind I am sure the same could not have been said of you. As it was, you were tense with embarrassment and expectancy—embarrassment at being "stuck" with the boy, and expectant that momentarily someone else might cut in to relieve your plight.

* * * *

Don't take the episode too seriously. Just set it down to a bad evening. Girls who are accustomed to going to dances five nights out of seven have their off nights, too; nights when everything seems to go wrong; when they see other girls basking in the spotlight of a popularity they are for the nonce unable to command; when their spell-binding charm seems to have deserted them completely; when they feel themselves duds and failures, even as you did on the night described.

* * * *

I think your escort must have been a little to blame, too. He couldn't have been a very gallant or discerning young man or he would have assured you that you danced divinely; that he could blissfully go on forever dancing to that music with you in his arms.

* * * *

Probably the only advantage the other girl had over you was a certain insouciance of manner which was able to shine over her partner's stumbling progress. Also, nothing succeeds like success, and once a girl gets into accidental circulation on a dance floor where the "cut in" method prevails, she seems just naturally to pass from partner to partner. However, there is no denying the fact that you should brush up on your dancing technique, if only to increase your feeling of self-confidence on the dance floor.

Household 'Gadgets' To Mark Exhibition

Electrical Device Will Turn Oven On or Off.

Gadgets to simplify the chores of 1936 homemaking will vie with furniture and draperies for first interest during the International Housefurnishings Exposition in the Merchandist Mart, Chicago, July 6-18.

Among a variety of electrical devices which will be featured during the exposition is a new type of automatic clock which can be set to turn the oven, percolator and radio on or off at a given hour. The clock can also be made to open and close windows.

One exhibitor will feature a new type of rubber bladed fan which eliminates all danger of mangled fingers and another a three-slice automatic electric toaster.

Another interesting new invention on which the exposition will turn the spotlight is a lightning-fast stove which absorbs enough heat from the burning of a wadded-up newspaper to cook bacon and eggs. Such a cooking outfit would be grand for picnics and informal parties out-of-doors.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

A LOT of busy people are inclined to sniff at the knitters and the fancy-workers but we don't. The most poised and gracious lady we know knits and she has a very sound philosophy on the subject.

"I knit for serenity," she told us. "It's monotonous and yet fascinating, and the best prescription I know for smoothing down the ruffled feathers a lady is likely to get by the end of a busy day. I always try to do a few rows of knitting before my husband comes home because it always ruffles him to find me ruffled."

Some men are like that. They look to their ladies for tranquillity of spirit they don't find in the whirl of business. Now a lady has her own whirl of household responsibilities but that doesn't give her any alibi for getting upset herself.

This particular lady confided that it took quite a bit of doing to acquire that state of calm that seemed to soothe her husband most when he came home evenings. She not only knitted for that reason but she planned her living room to be poised and restful too. And it is. The walls are a warm shade of gray and the rug is a small patterned Oriental design with no one color predominating. The sofa is in an African daisy red and the two easy chairs are in a faded blue-green. The draperies are in a mellow figured material that subtly repeats the other shades in the room without shouting about it. She has achieved a stunning effect with the lighting. She has a pair of Venetian blind screens—or shutter screens—painted the same gray as the walls. She has the lights for the room behind these and of course they cast a delightful glow over the room. There are supplementary lamps on tables here and there beside chairs in the room, but the general room illumination comes from behind the screens.

Send a stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin "Sew Yourself a Family History." It includes five pages of patterns of motifs that you can use in creating a piece of needlework that will have heirloom quality in your family.

D.C. Foreign War Veterans Will Parade

17th Annual Session to Open With March Set for 7:15 o'Clock.

Business Meetings and Officer Installation Are on Program.

The seventeenth annual encampment of the Department of the District of Columbia, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will open today with a street parade, starting at 7:15 p. m., from the formation area at Fourteenth street and Florida avenue northwest.

The line of march will be south on Fourteenth street to I street, east on I street to Twelfth street, north on Twelfth street to the Thomson School at Twelfth and L streets, where the business sessions will be held. The reviewing and judges stand will be in Franklin Park.

Kaiser Heads Committee.

The parade is being sponsored by the Central Busiess Men's Association which will award trophies to the best decorated floats, marching units and bands. The merchant's committee is headed by Hugh V. Kaiser, president, assisted by Vice President Harry King and William R. Whipp. The veterans committee is headed by Col. Harry Coope, U. S. A., retired, department chief of staff, assisted by John J. Keehan and Byron G. Carson.

Business sessions of the encampment will continue through Wednesday and will close with the installation of newly elected officers by National Commander in Chief James E. Van Zandt.

Many resolutions concerning important matters of particular interest to the V. F. W. and its members will be formulated at the department encampment to be forwarded to the national encampment, which will be held in Denver, Colo., next September.

McCathran Candidate.

Department officers will be elected. The outstanding candidate for department commander is Col. Wallach McCathran, Columbia Post; for senior vice commander, Leonard J. Bacon, Equality Walter Reed Post; for junior vice commander, Philip Belt, Follow-Me Post, and E. E. McGowan, commander of Federal Post. From present indications Department Judge Advocate Philip F. Biggins, Surgeon Dr. John B. DeMayo and Chaplain Rev. Howard E. Snyder will succeed themselves.

Commander John J. Reardon, Washington Post, announced that the clubrooms at 1508 Fourteenth street will be open for delegates and visitors during the encampment. The clubrooms are located on the line of the parade march and are but a short distance from the Thomson School.

Col. Coope, parade marshal, asked all participating units be in the formation area at 6:30 p. m.

Firecrackers Start Blaze In Mail Box; Also Complications

Smoke billowed from a mail box at Vermont avenue and S street northwest last night and a passer-by turned in the alarm.

The firemen came, sloshed water into the box, put out the fire.

But they couldn't open the box. It's against postal rules.

So they left a policeman on guard and several hours later located the collector on the route, George Lesh. He opened the box.

Some children had thrown firecrackers into the box. That's what started the fire. The children ran away and haven't been caught.

The postman got the burnt leters.

Fireworks Season Opens; Boy Burned

The year's first firework accident occurred yesterday when a 5-year-old boy suffered powder burns on his hands and arms from an exploding fire cracker.

The boy, Charles Cole, of 1659 Cramer street northeast, was taken to Casualty Hospital by his mother. He was treated and released. The burns were not srious.

District Seeks Tax Payments On Prall Home

Three Sisters Face Eviction in 33-Year-Old Fight on Ownership.

Three elderly women who have lived all their lives on lower Sixteenth street may find themselves before the Supreme Court or out in the street because the District has decided to make a test case of their ivy-covered house.

Taxes on the property at 918-20 Sixteenth street, near Lafayette Square, have been accumulating for nearly 50 years because of a disputed title and now amount to within a few dollars of the $66,368 assessed valuation.

Acting Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West was preparing yesterday to press for payment of these taxes under the newly-amended Phipps act which allows the Commissioners to apply to the District Supreme Court for auction sale of such properties.

The property was purchased in 1866 by 21-year-old William E. Prall on the profits of an invention. He installed Washington's first central heating plant in the old building and made it one of the city's brightest social centers.

In it over 65 years ago, were born the three sisters involved in the present case, Miss Virginia M. Prall, Mrs. Annie Prall Fahnestock and Mrs. Emma Prall Knorr. They have lived there ever since.

It was in this house that Mrs. Knorr, one of Edward McDowell's few pupils, taught piano lessons to Ethel Roosevelt.

When their father died, he left the property to his grandchildren, making his children life tenants. In 1903 his son, William, jr., died. Then the trobule began.

A woman, who claimed she was William, jr.'s wife, although the sisters had never been told of their brother's marriage, appeared and asked the court for title to the property.

She maintained that she and the deceased brother had been secretly married in New York when she was 17 and that a son had been born, who died before his father.

The lower court upheld her contention that title to the property had passed through her son to his father and thence to her upon his death, even though he made no mention of her in his will.

While a costly legal battle was being waged for 23 years, no one paid taxes on the property, not knowing to whom it belonged. Finally, in 1926, the District Supreme Court decided it was a big mistake and returned life tenancy to the Prall sisters. The mystery wife died two years ago.

And now the sisters, their father's fortune depleted by litigation and the stock-market crash, face eviction.

"Terrible Shock."

"It was a terrible shock to me to hear about it," Miss Prall said last night. "I had to live through so many years of legal fights that I thought it would kill me. I hoped I'd die before I heard any more about the property. It was a daily nightmare.

"We can't go out in the street. There is no other place for us to go, if they put us out. We are not tax evaders. But when we were finally told the property was ours, the taxes had mounted to over $40,000. We tried to sell it, but no one seems to be buying in this neighborhood.

"Lots of people have offered help. But what we want is justice, not sympathy. I believe it is taxation without representation, and I'm going to fight for my home."

Retired Sergeant Plunges to Death

Despondent because of an illness of many years, Vernon E. Compton, 58-year-old retired Army sergeant, leaped three floors to his death yesterday in the Administration Building of Walter Reed Hospital.

Compton had been a patient at the hospital for several years, coming here from his home in Roanoke, Va. Other inmates of the hospital told Detective Sergt. John Wise, who investigated the case, that Compton had received his bonus, but it had failed to cheer him.

Witnesses said Compton leaped over a balcony railing on the third floor. He fell to the concrete on the first floor. He was pronounced dead by a hospital physician.

Acting Coroner Christopher J. Murphy issued a certificate of suicide.

Farmer Gets Chance to Prove Worth of Electric Gadgets

Virginian to Fight Flies, Milk Cows, Shell Corn and Incubate Chickens With Appliances Donated by Manufacturers Association.

Beginning July 1 the Rural Electrification Administration will assume the role of Mephistopheles.

Faust in the coming drama is a Herndon, Va., farmer, J. M. Hughes.

The irresistible temptations in this instance consist of innumerable electric gadgets, all the way from an electric hay pitcher to ultra-violet ray lamps for the chickens on Hughes' pre-revolutionary Rosedale dairy farm on the Leesburg pike.

The denouement will come at the end of September when the third World Power Conference, for which the farm is being electrified, closes. After pushing buttons all summer and having most everything on the farm operate automatically, Hughes will be faced with the alternative of buying over $2,000 worth of equipment or going back to the old way of doing things.

Life Blissful.

In the meantime life will be blissful. When all his neighbors are sweltering, he will be able to sit comfortably in ris airconditioned home. When the flies get too bad, all he has to do it throw a switch and electrified screens will kill all insects frying to enter. Electric fences will keep the cows out of the neighbor's corn.

For three months Farmer Hughes will milk his 40 cows, chop his wood, grind sausage, shell corn, churn butter and incubate chickens by alternating current.

If he forgets to do anything important during the daylight hours, that will be taken care of by huge floodlights which will illuminate the yard for the asking.

Mrs. Hughes will be able to curl and dry her hair, wash the dishes, cook the meals, heat the water and iron her dresses and cook waffles, also by electricity.

Even the 40 cows will benefit. Electricity will keep their air fresh and hear their water, and they will undoubtedly be happy to know that their milk will immediately be reduced to ice-box temperature.

Absolutely Free.

And all of this will be absolutely free. Members of the National Electric Manufacturers Association are donating the equipment and the power will be given by the Virginia Public Service Co.

There is one stipulation. The public in large droves will be wandering all over the farm between July 1 and September 12, when the Third World Power Conference closes. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes say they won't mind this; they like people.

The REA picked this farm after looking over 65 possibilities within a radius of 20 miles from the White House. It is over 200 years old and Stonewall Jackson is said to have stayed there during the Civil War.

The trouble will come when the picnic is over and Hughes will have to go back to swatting flies and milking the 40 cows by hand or else buy the equipment.

Incidentally, all this is being done because 700 scientists from 40 countries are coming to Washington for the conference and a discussion of "The National Power Economy." It is being sponsored jointly by the United States Government and the electrical industry and is being held concurrently with the Second Congress on Large Dams.

Gideons Will Hold Camp MeetingHere

Gideon members from six Eastern States will rally in Washington next week-end for a camp meeting and to place 2,000 Bibles in hotel guest rooms of the city.

National Chaplain S. A. Fulton, formerly international president, will occupy the pulpits of two churches in the city during the day and will speak at an afternoon dedicatory service in the Willard Hotel.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper also will speak at the service.

Arriving Saturday, the Gideons will attend a banquet in the Washington Hotel at night.

Festival Scheduled For Tomorrow Night

The Community Center department and the office of the National Capital Parks will present the second summer festival of the present season Tuesday night at 8.

Held at the Sylvan Theater, the program will open with a half-hour concert by the United States Navy Band and will be followed by a performance of the play, "Smilin' Thru," by the Blackfriars Guild of Washington.

Navy Devises DirectionGuide For Navigators

New Tables Are Reported as Improvement Over Ageton System.

A new set of computed tables to enable aviators and navigators, when blown off their course, to find their positions with greater speed and accuracy than ever before, has been devised by the Navy's Hydrographic Office.

The tables, prepared under the direction of Capt. Lamar Leahy, head of the hydrographic office, after more than a year's calculation, have been sent to the printers and are expected to be available for distribution before the end of the summer.

The new tables are a vast improvement over the Ageton dead-reckoning, direction-finding tables now used by most fliers and navigators, reducing the necessary calculation by two-thirds.

The primary calculations to find the local hour angle remain the same with the new tables. But where with the present navigation tables, several minutes of added calculation are required to determine the position, with the new tables, the flier will be able simply to open the book and pick out his position.

Greater accuracy is also expected as the possibility of error in calculations are reduced.

Work on the new set of tables was started more than a year ago by Commander R. H. Knight and Lieut. R. J. Jasperson, then attached to the Hydrographic office. When they were assigned elsewhere the work was completed by Lieut. Comdr. John E. Gingrich and Elmer B. Collins, senior scientist of the office.

Townsend Slated For Elections Post

Senator John G. Townsend, jr. (Republican), Delaware, a farm boy who became a power in the industrial East, is expected to be chosen head of the Senate Republican Congressional Elections Committee, it was reported tonight.

He would succeed Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), Delaware, who has announced he will not seek re-election. Hastings, who has conducted a running attack on the New Deal since President Roosevelt came to office, will retire to private law practice.

A tentative agreement to put Townsend in command of the Republican senatorial fight was said to have been reached by party leaders after several conferences. It was emphasized, however, that the selection was not definite yet.

Rainbow Veterans Name Kay as Head

William H. Kay, formerly of the 165th Field Hospital, Forty-second Division, A. E. F., unanimously was elected president of the District of Columbia Chapter of the Rainbow Division Veterans in its eighteenth annual election.

Other officers named included Elmer F. Neagle, honorary president; Winfield Scott Lynn, Maj. Herbert J. Bryson, Huber B. Schultz and Cecil J. Wilkinson, vice presidents; Fred W. Jordan, secretary; Bernard V. Rhodes, treasurer; Oscar A. Jackson, historian; Rev. Arlington A. McCallum, chaplain; Harry M. Ford, sergeant at arms, and Bentley Mulford, publicity officer.

Miss Helen Hayes, Washington-born actress, who is the wife of Rainbow Charlie McArthur, dramatist and author, was elected as "permanent honorary colonel."

D.C. Greets Starting Day Of Summer

Visitors Flock to City and Residents Go to Country.

Breezes Blow to Ease Temperature of 88; Cooler Today.

Summer arrived in the Capital on time yesterday at 9:22 a. m., as scheduled in the almanac, and was well received by Washington and by the weatherman.

It was a rare June day. Promised clouds appeared only infrequently, and by 9:22 Washington was on its way to the beaches and the country.

Potomac River bathing places all had visitors by midday. Canoe clubs up and down the river had their biggest day of the season.

A stiff breeze sent a flotilla of sailing craft downstream, and gave skippers a real tussle getting them back. Motor yachtsmen found the longest day of the year an ideal time for more ambitious excursions than they have ventured this season.

Temperature 88.

The U. S. Weather Bureau found nothing unusual in this first day of summer. The highest temperature, recorded at 2 p. m., was 88 degrees. That's warm, but thermometers in Washington climbed higher than that this spring.

To those in bathing suits, however, temperatures meant nothing. They basked in the sun and harvested a fine crop of sun-burned backs.

Congressmen were reported scurrying homeward. But in the Capital there was no dearth of activity.

Tourists were in from every section of the country, and the staff of guides in the Capitol led a steady procession of interested parties through the halls where history is made.

Many Visitors.

Other public buildings in Washington had their quotas of visitors, too. The Washington Monument entertained capacity crowds all day, and last night long lines were still waiting their turn to make the 555-foot lift.

Absence of rain yesterday was generally hailed by the pleasure seekers, but gardeners say their flowers and vegetables are in need of water. There hasn't been enough rain here lately, and horticulturists were disappointed when the breeze, that helped the nautical-minded, failed to blow up a rain.

There will be even less hope of showers today than there was yesterday, when the weatherman said there was a possibility of a storm.

It will be cooler today, the Weather Bureau predicted last night, but the second day of summer will be as fair as the first.

Police Pursue Man In Shorts on Roof; Book Him as Drunk

The crash of splintering glass, the sight of a large flower pot sailing through a window led police to a house in the 600 block Madison street northwest early yesterday.

A man in shorts was on the roof of a house when Sixth Precinct police arrived. He led police a chase over roof tops of every house in the block, and then leaped through space from the roof top to a tree nearly 15 feet from the house.

When he reached the ground police had to use force to control the prisoner, it was reported. He was subdued and was taken to the Sixth Precinct station.

Booked on charges of drunk and disorderly, the man said he was A. Kenneth Armstrong, 38, of 612 Madison street northwest. He posted $20 collateral and was released.

4-H Group Honors Unknown Soldier

Because the day was Sunday, 158 4-H boys and girls here for the organization's national encampment slept until 6:30 a. m. yesterday.

Every day they had been arising at 6 a. m. and for the rest of the encampment which lasts through Wednesday they will arise at 6.

Routine was more leisurely, however, yesterday. An educational tour—a nature walk in Rock Creek Park—was the morning feature. Later, groups were organized to attend church services.

Early in the afternoon, the boys and girls made a pilgrimage to Arlington and at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier they stood in a moment of silent prayer honoring the war dead. A 4-H boy and a 4-H girl placed a wreath on the tomb.

Also included in the Arlington tour were the Memorial Amphitheater, the Curtis-Lee Mansion and the United States Department of Agriculture experiment farm nearby.

Vesper services were held in the evening.

Training School Girls Hear Classical Music

Nothera Barton, Concert Pianist, Plays Program for Inmates Who Reciprocate With Songs; Cakes and Punch Are Served.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

While a few outsiders benignly looked on, the 33 inmates of the National Training School for Girls had a musicale yesterday afternoon, which, like all well-planned affairs of the kind, started with Brahms and Chopin and ended with prettily iced cakes and fruit punch.

In between there were spirituals sung by the colored residents of the institution far out on the Conduit road.

The event in the inevitably monotonous lives of the girls was only a little less important than the garden party Mrs. Roosevelt gave for them at the White House a couple of months ago.

With their faces carefully powdered and their bright cotton dresses as crisp as morning, they sat quietly at the old-fashioned, uncomfortable desks in the schoolroom and listened to a concert pianist play especially for them.

Miss Barton Is Soloist.

She was Nothera Barton, of New York, a long-time friend of Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, head of the institution.

The piano pedal squeaked, the afternoon was hot, the desk seats were straight and hard, but the audience, especially the colored portion of it, listened intently to every note Miss Barton played.

The Brahms group, an intermezzo, two waltzes and the familiar lullaby, evoked only moderate applause; the girls seemed a little puzzled by the richness and emotional depth of the music. They clapped their hands politely, as though they knew they should like it, that it was probably good for them.

And then Miss Barton began a Chopin mazurka. From the moment her fingers started dancing over the keys with brilliant melody, the girls were with her. They nodded their heads with the strong down beat and smiled knowingly at each other as the pianist flew through some particularly sparkling passage.

Music They Understood.

This, evidently, was the sort of music they understood best; gay and light and frolicking. The room rang with their handclaps as the last notes echoed through the simple, white-walled room.

After the Chopin mazurka things went a little better. There was more nodding and smiling over Debussy's "Dance of Puck" and "Fireworks." The five white inmates never waxed exactly enthusiastic but even they shed their thin mantle of indifference—which may have been boredom or may have been self-consciousness—when the pianist played the amusing "White Donkey," by Ibert.

The whole bunch smiled with satisfaction when the braying of the donkey came plainly from the piano.

Then the colored girls sang the songs of their own race. Forgotten were those smiling visitors at the back of the room. Forgotten was everything but the melancholy, rhythmic chant. Six or seven of the 28 colored inmates started the singing, sitting at their desks. But soon the others were caught up and swept along by the music so that from two dozen throats came the promise, "Bye 'n' Bye I'm Gonna Lay Down My Heavy Load."

Girls Sing Solos.

At intervals the chorus subsided into silence and one clear voice carried the song. The soloist's heavy eyes gazed unfalteringly through the opened window into the breeze-swept trees beyond. Her hands were folded in her lap, the blue and white checked cotton of her dress was high about her throat, the sun seemed to flick sparks from her gold hoop earrings. But never once did her eyes leave that cool greenness beyond.

When the song was done another girl sang. She left her gnarled desk, advanced to the front of the room, and with her hands clasped behind her, poured forth the melody of "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child."

The chorus, starting again with the same six or seven voices, gained in volume as it swept along in "I Ain't Gonna Study War No More."

Then Dr. Smith announced that refreshments would be served. The five white girls slipped to the back of the room to get the cakes they had baked and frosted that morning and the punch they had made. The residents ate at their desks; there was no mingling with the guests.

After everyone had been served, Dr. Smith announced there would be a story hour in the schoolroom at 6:45. She hopes, she said, to have other Sunday afternoon musicales. The girls smiled their approval.

Y. M. to Open Home Camping Season Today

Programs Arranged for Boys Unable to Leave City in Summer.

Stay-at-home camps, for children who are unable to go to those out of the city, will get under way here within a few days. The Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A. will begin its stay-at-home program today. Friendship House has arranged a comprehensive round of activities for both boys and girls.

The "Y" Boys will take part in hikes, educational tours, baseball, swimming, tennis, track events, and other features, according to Fred Carpenter, associate director of the department. Tennis instruction will be given Monday and Wednesday afternoons. The finer points of baseball will be taught on Ellipse diamonds and swimming lessons will be given at the "Y" pool Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 9:15.

The stay-at-home camp at Friendship House will include arts and crafts, dramatics, dressmking, piano lessons, story telling, swimming and tennis for girls; art, dramatics, baseball, hiking, harmonica playing, Indian craft, piano lessons, rope spinning, and swimming for boys.

Girl Scouts will go to Camp Stay-at-Home programs in Langdon Park every Tuesday morning at 10. Girl Reserves will attend a similar camp at the Y. W. C. A. every Wednesday morning at 9:30.

During July, Friendship House will conduct a summer school every morning except Saturday and Sunday for boys and girls of the first and second grades who need coaching.

Corps Asked to Aid Orphaned Children

Development of a corps of visiting housekeepers, paid out of public moneys, whose duty would be to aid fathers who are caring alone for their children was urged by Miss A. Patricia Morss, chief of the child welfare division of the Board of Public Welfare, yesterday.

"The division of child welfare does not like to see Father's Day go by without some recognition being given to those fathers who alone are successfully making the struggle to maintain the home for their children," Miss Morss said.

"The difficulties which a father often has in keeping a family of small children together after the mother has died should be better recognized by the State and community services organized to help him."

2 Strato Fliers To Get Trophy ForRecordHop

Mackay Honor for 1935 Goes to Capts. Stevens and Anderson.

Capt. Albert W. Stevens and Capt. Orvil A. Anderson, commander and pilot of the stratosphere balloon, Explorer II, will receive the Mackay Trophy for 1935 tomorrow afternoon for their successful flight last fall more than 14 miles into the air—the highest altitude ever attained by man.

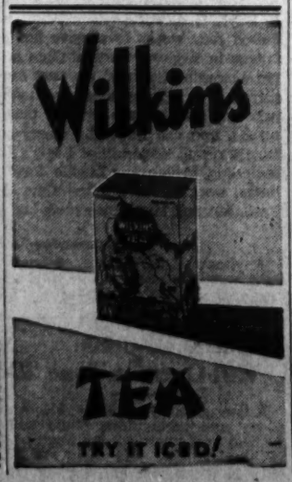
The trophy, a silver bowl, adorned with four winged feminine figures and biplanes poised for flight, is awarded each year to the Army officer making the most meritorious flight of the year.

Formal presentation of the award will be made by Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, at the headquarters of the National Geographic Society, sponsors of the flight. Participating in the ceremonies will be Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor and Dr. John Oliver La Gorce, president and vice president of the society, and Charles F. Horner, president of the National Aeronautic Association.

It will be the second time that 49-year-old Capt. Stevens has received the trophy. In 1929, it was awarded him for his work in the development of long-range aerial photography for photographting Mount Rainier and several other snow-covered peaks at a distance of 227 miles.

Child Hurt by Trolley Suffers Loss of Arm

John Warren Miller, 3, was injured seriously yesterday when struck by a street car near his home, 3619 Prospect avenue northwest. The child was removed to Georgetown Hospital, where his arm was amputated. In addition, he suffered severe cuts and bruises about the face and body.



Philadelphia Gem Holdup Gang Sought

Robbery Car Same One Used by Bogus Money Passers Here.

Quaker City Help Asked in Hunt; Loot Value Set at $4,000.

Three Philadelphia gunmen, sought here several months ago for passing counterfeit money, are wanted for questioning in the robbery of the Carl Petersen jewelry store, Woodward Building, Saturday afternoon, it was learned from police.

A passerby told police he saw a maroon-colored coupe, bearing New York State license plates leave from in front of the building. The tag numbers are the same as those on the automobile said to have been used by the counterfeiters.

Carl Petersen and his wife, Jeanetta, were bound with heavy twine and strips of adhesive tape was placed over their mouths by the bandits who systematically looted two show cases and a safe of nearly $4,000 in diamond jewelry.

Petersen told police yesterday that an inventory disclosed the loss to be about $4,000, after a rough estimate Saturday evening set the amount at $10,000.

The three men, who earlier in the day had phoned Petersen for an appointment to buy some rings, entered the shop shortly before 5 p. m. They asked to see several rings, then drew guns and demanded of the Petersens where the money was kept.

Apparently familiar with expensive stones and jewelry, the men took only the most expensive pieces from the cases and safe. Inexpensive watches and trinkets were merely thrown aside.

Having completed their haul, the bandits bound Mr. and Mrs. Petersen and pushed them behind the safe. Petersen, after an hour, freed his bonds and managed to get to the window and summon help.

Efforts to identify their assailants were futile yesterday when the Petersens failed to recognize any pictures in the local rogue's gallery.

Police believe the men came to town several days ago, planned the robbery thoroughly, and then left the city immediately.

Philadelphia police have been asked to watch for pieces of the loot that might turn up in pawn shops.

Woman Tears Off Policeman's Badge And Bites His Arm

Acting Sergt. John W. Kite, of the Harbor Precinct, was standing at the Seventh street wharf early yesterday seeing that passengers from a "moonlight" cruise created no disturbance.

Kite said he was just standing by when an attractive woman came up to him, tore his badge from his shirt and threw it in the street, announcing to all that she hated policemen.

Sergt. Kite felt embarrassed. He tried to calm the enraged boatrider. She bit him on the arm and Kite arrested her.

Charged with disorderly conduct and assault the woman, who was lodged in the House of Detention, gave her name as Betty Reynolds, 25, of 2418 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

Sergt. Kite was treated at Providence Hospital for the wound in his left arm.

Picture Stars Are Deserting OldHomeTown

Many Build DistantHomes; Jimmy Challenges Clark; West Coast Notes.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 21.—A growing fad for long range commuting among stars is rapidly putting Hollywood on the "wrong side of the railroad tracks."

It seems no longer fashionable to live in the old home town of the movies, and indications are the place ultimately may be abandoned to the "peasantry" of the industry—extras, screen writers, technicians, electricians, assistant directors and such.

Katharine (the Great) Hepburn is one of the torchbearers of the new movement. She makes her home in classic Hartford, Conn., and uppercase sections of New York, fleeing this sordid movie mill by airplane as soon as a picture is finished.

Lawrence Tibbett is another who wants no part of Hollywood, consistently remaining in New York when not on camera duty, although it should be said he does more concerts than pictures.

They Like the East.

Eddie Sutherland, director, has been scampering back and forth between Hollywood and New York for years, and his residence is at the eastern end of the shuttle. Similarly, John Beal, who occasionally week-ends in Manhattan even while working. Harriet Hilliard is a confirmed New Yorker, and Claude Rains commutes regularly between the film city and his Pennsylvania farm, near Philadelphia.

Most of those who remain in southern California prefer to keep a judicious distance from Hollywood. A growing community in the San Fernando Valley, 10 to 40 miles north, includes Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler, Edward Everett Horton, Arline Judge, Paul Muni and others.

Wallace Beery is a plane commuter from his Silver Lake ranch more than 200 miles away in the Sierras. Warner (Charlie Chan) Oland lives on a ranch at Carpinteria, 150 miles distant. Janet Gaynor spends a large part of the year in Honolulu.

Bing Crosby and Herbert Marshall have ranches in San Diego County, 100 miles south of Hollywood, while Richard Dix, Frances Dee and Joel McCrea have ranches to the north.

The Schmeling Influence.

Casting a fishy eye at Clark Gable's reported knockout of Alan Pomeroy in a fight scene for "Cain and Mabel," James Dunn challenged Gable to a ten-round fight, winner take all, but says he has received no reply.

Now he thinks Gable should take on Max Baer, in order to build a reputation. Dunn says he is a full-fledged boxer himself, because he is working in a movie called "The Fighter," and that there is no reason why he shouldn't get his name in the papers, too.

Nino Martini's latest romance is a natural, like ham and eggs. He's presently adoring Lillian Emerson, 19-year-old Baltimore socialite with screen ambitions, who is heiress to the bromo-seltzer fortune. For every Martini there must inevitably be a bromo-seltzer.

Franchot Tone seems a cinch to repeat his Broadway role in "Green Grow the Lilacs" for the movies. M-G-M has just bought the Lynn Riggs play from RKO with Tone in mind.

Hollywood Odds and Ends.

RKO-Radio, on the other hand, is busy hunting a story for Claudette Colbert, who just signed to do a picture or two under the Radio banner.

Riverdale Hospital is overwhelmed with flowers and telegrams for ailing W. C. Fields.

After completing "We Who Are About to Die," at RKO, David Lamson shifts to Twentieth Century-Fox to adapt his story "That I May Live."

Greta Garbo has presented an etching of her home in Sweden to fashion designer Adrian, the lucky fellow.

Anna Sten once designed cock-eyed impressionistic stage settings for the Moscow Art Theater. Now she's designing interiors for her home in Santa Monica in the chintz and gingerbread style.

Gary Cooper will do six pictures in three years for Samuel Goldwyn.

Susan Anthony Forum Hears Memorial Plans

Prospects for passage of the Copeland-Capper bill providing for inclusion of Susan B. Anthony in the Mount Rushmore National Memorial were reviewed at the season's last meeting of the Susan B. Anthony Forum.

The forum adopted a resolution, introduced by Mrs. Rose Arnold Powell, founder of the organization, providing that the United States Supreme Court distinguish between the words man and woman as applied to citizenship because:

"There are varying views among both men and women as to what constitutes the status of women and girls according to the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution."

About the Showshops

DESPITE the fact that July is almost in the heart of the between-seasons period of rest and recreation for "the profession," the big-time theater will visit Washington next month, even if only in broken doses.

It may be looked upon as something of a booking coup on the part of the gentlemen providing the Capital's stage entertainment that anything more impressive than "chaser acts" is made available to local theatergoers once the mercury really begins climbing out of the top of that tube. The modern temples of the cinema may be air-cooled to the audience, but work is work up there behind those footlights and there are precious few vitamins in a baby spot.

BELL.

However, no less an artiste than Harriet Hoctor will be along to headline the stage bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater the week beginning Friday, July 10—which is only a trifle more than a fortnight away—and two weeks after that, or on Friday, July 24, Loew's Fox will present a revived and modernized version of a full-fledged Broadway musical comedy, "Spring Is Here."

Harriet Hoctor, by every right, shares with Washington's own Patricia Bowman the distinction of being America's prima ballerina. Both supply to the present generation a taste of those airy graces that have made the names of Pavlowa, Genee, Isadora Duncan and Gertrude Hoffman synonymous with the exquisite refinement of choreographic eloquence and Terpsichorean classicism in the American theater. Miss Hoctor's artistry last was disclosed to Washington audiences in the animal ballet sequences of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen spectacle of "The Great Ziegfeld," presented this spring as a road show attraction in the National Theater.

When she appears in person at the Earle, Miss Hoctor and her supporting coryphees will present "Amour Coquette," first introduced in Ziegfeld's stage production of "The Three Musketeers," which had its premiere in the National Theater here, and "The Raven," created for one of Earl Carroll's productions of "The Vanities." Following a brief vaudeville tour, she will return to Hollywood to appear with Fred Astaire in a new musical picture planned by RKO-Radio.

"Spring Is Here" originally was produced by Alex Aarons and Vinton Freedley at the Alvin Theater in New York, with such favorites as Charles Ruggles, Cy Landry, Glenn Hunter, John Huntley, Ohman and Arden, the piano duettists, and many others in the cast. Owen Davis contrived the book of the piece and Dick Rodgers and Lorenz Hart contributed the music and lyrics.

Gene Ford, manager of Loew's Fox and a competent stage director in his own right, after several readings of the script, has progressed to the point of casting activities along Broadway, where he is confident he can recruit a cast which in at least a few departments will excel the original. Further announcement with regard to this feature of the production is promised within a matter of days. The production will be staged in addition to, and considerably before, Mr. Ford's annual "Going Native" revue.

There have been condensed versions of standard musical comedies on local motion picture theater stages before, but never one approached quite from the angle of this ambitious enterprise.

Summer, it seems, no longer is summer in the National Capital's playhouses—or at least it carries over a considerable measure of refrigerated midwinter distinction.

Today in Madison, Wis., Katharine Cornell will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters from the University of Wisconsin. In order to attend the commencement exercises there, Miss Cornell temporarily will suspend performances of George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," in which she now is touring. Following the ceremony, the actress-producer will proceed directly to Los Angeles, where she will resume her tour in the Biltmore Theater on Thursday night of this week, June 25. So says the latest bulletin from the indefatigable Ray Henderson, writing as Miss Cornell's "News Bureau" from the Grand Opera House in Chicago. That would be on North Clark street opposite the city hall, between Washington and Randolph—or have they moved the town around these past 20 years or so?

Dots and Dashes.

Pictures of the Schmeling-Louis fight in New York last Friday night, when a melon sprouted on Joe Louis' left jaw and a mountain fell over on the ring experts, already are being shown within easy reach of Washington . . . They are on view at the State Theater in Bethesda, Md., and will continue to be for an indefinite run . . . Every hour on the hour, I believe the schedule is . . . If that is too close and you have to go all the way to Baltimore to see them, they will be found at Izzy Rappaport's Hippodrome Theater on Eutaw street, where they go on at 11:20 a. m., 2:05, 4:50, 7:20 and 9:50 p. m. . . . That's a swell law that keeps them out of the District, and nowhere else! . . . Swell for the gasoline stations, that is . . . "Half Angel" will be the next attraction at Loew's Columbia, beginning whenever "Under Two Flags" goes on its way . . . Frances Dee, Brian Donlevy and Charles Butterworth play the leads . . . The Roadside Theater, with its initial production of "Around the World in 80 Days," last week reached the capacity attendance record that it required four weeks to achieve last season . . . Nice going . . . The same is true in large measure of Glen Echo Park, where this season's crowds are exceeding those of the past few seasons by so many that you'd be surprised . . . No wonder—just take a look at the pretty picture on this page and see only one of more than 50 reasons! . . . As far as I am concerned, you can have the merry-go-round . . . Donald Novis, canceled from a recent stage bill at Loew's Fox, will be along to headline the one beginning Friday . . Lucille Page and Buster West are the co-headliners, working for the first time locally as a double dancing team . . . Yeah, Mr. and Mrs., since their last booking here.

County's Group To Join in Rally For Roosevelt

Ticket Sale Drive Opens Today in Arlington; Moncure in Charge.

More than 2,500 Arlington County Democrats will join with the Washington Democratic organizations in a rally at Griffith Stadium Saturday night to hear the radio address of President Roosevelt broadcast from Franklin Field, Philadelphia, as the closing event of the Democratic National Convention.

The county unit in the parade will be headed by Joseph Arnold as grand marshal.

Arthur C. Stickley 2d, chairman of the Arlington County finance division of the Democratic National Committee, announced last night that all Democratic organizations in the county today will begin a ticket sale drive for the rally.

The ticket sale will be headed by R. C. L. Moncure, president of the Men's Democratic Cub; John Paul Jones, president of the Young Democratic Club; Mrs. Laura T. Boldin, president of the Woman's Democratic Club; Robert N. Anderson, president of the Roosevelt-for-President Club, and Charles R. Fenwick, chairman of the county Democratic executive committee.

Albert H. Cohen has been named treasurer for the county finance division, Dennis W. Ladd, secretary, and Maynard M. Carlisle, advertising chairman. Other members assisting in arrangements include Howard B. Fields, Harry K. Green, C. B. Laycock, Lawrence W. Douglas, Charles T. Jesse, Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder, George M. Yeatman, William E. A. McShea, Freeland F. Chew, and William D. Medley.

Highland Park Citizens Association will meet Wednesday night at the home of James R. Williams.

Virginia history, particularly of Arlington and Fairfax Counties, will be stressed by the Woman's Club of Arlington during the year, it was announced at a meeting of the executive committee on Saturday. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. H. W. Petty, president.

Plans were made for a dinner and entertainment in honor of the husbands and male friends of members of the club. The time and place to be announced later.

In lieu of the monthly meeting of the Arlington County Republican Club this month, the club announces a picnic at Glen Echo will be held at 5 p. m. Wednesday. There will be a number of speakers including Phil Campbell, former member of the House from Kansas, who will speak on, "Behind the Scenes at the Republican Convention."

Word was received yesterday by Roy S. Braden, former Arlington County manager, now connected with the Resettlement Administration, of the death of his father-in-law, D. E. Pense, 70, at his home at Greenville, W. Va. Braden left immediately for Greenville to join his wife, who was at her father's bedside.

A series of cottage prayer meetings will start at 10 a. m. today in preparation for the Arlington County revival, to be held July 5 to 20 in the Cherrydale Firemen's Hall, with the Rev. T. R. Brady, pastor of the First Baptist Church, of Washington, conducting.

Churches sponsoring the revivals are the Arlington Baptist Church, Arlington Presbyterian Church, Ballston Christian Church, Mount Olivet Methodist Church, of Ballston; Cherrydale Methodist Church, United Baptist Church of Cherrydale, Clarendon Baptist Church, Fort Myer Heights Baptist Church, Fort Myer Heights Methodist Church, Walker Chapel Methodist Church, Vanderwergan Methodist Church and the Community Methodist Church of Aurora Heights.

W. H. Hallman, 83, Dies at Home Here

William H. Hallman, 83, father of William N. Hallman, structural engineer with the construction division of the Army Quartermaster Corps, died yesterday at his home, 1847 Ingleside terrace northwest. He had been ill six months.

Mr. Hallman was born in Norrinton, Pa., but spent most of his life at Norristown, Pa. He was a carpenter.

After his retirement nine years ago, Mr. Hallman came to Washington to live with his son.

Funeral services will be held at Norristown at 2 p. m. Wednesday. Burial will be in Montgomery Cemetery there.

Former Representative Capitol Guide

At the right is Charles Rogers Evans, who represented Nevada in the House, now a Capitol guide.

Ex-Rep. C. R. Evans, of Nevada, Now a Capitol Guide—Likes Job

Former House Member Says Work Gives Him 'Opportunity of Life Time,' a Chance to Become Public Speaker.

Charles Rogers Evans, whom citizens of Nevada once elected to the House of Representatives, is back, at the age of 70, in the Capitol.

He visits both halls of Congress several times a day, but this time he is a member of neither.

He is a guide who points out the Capitol's historic rooms, statues of famous people and the other interesting features to all the tourists who will listen. He tosses the silken, white hair from his piercing eyes, and says he considers the job "the opportunity of a lifetime."

"All my life I have wanted to be a public speaker," he said, pausing between trips around the building yesterday.

"I didn't get a chance to do much, while I was in the House (that was during the 1918-1920 term). Now I am getting all the practice I want."

Evans said speaking is the thing he is most conscientious about. He's had to study up on the history of the Capitol, of course—but that has been a matter of course. He has done infinitely more studying on the subject of public speaking.

"I have an ambition," the man who has lived three-score-and-ten revealed, "right now I want to be the best guide there is in the Capitol. I can do this by trying hard to make each trip more interesting to my listeners, than the one just preceding."

Trip In Covered Wagon.

While the desire to be a public speaker has been, Evans believes, the driving force in his life, it has by no means kept him on a stump.

The first thing in his life that he remembers was a covered wagon trip from Illinois to the plains of Nebraska. Out West he became interested in mining. When the business was still prosperous he owned a copper mine in Nevada.

His son went to France during the war, and Evans decided "he'd like to know how things are run in Washington." He ran for Congress on the Democratic ticket. He won—to be defeated two years later in the Harding landslide.

Bought Apartment House.

Out of politics, he bought an apartment house in Miami, Fla., and operated it for two years. For another two years he sold automobiles in Chicago.

He went to Los Vegas, Nev., hoping to get work during the construction of Boulder Dam. He was unsuccessful.

Then he got his appointment on the Capitol guide staff. Evans lives alone in Washington. A daughter resides in Nebraska.

Commissioners Thank Thomas For Aid on Bill

Hazen Says D. C. Favors Federal-Capital Fiscal Relations Study.

Thanks of the District Commissioners and the people of Washington were expressed in a letter written yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen to Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate District appropriations sub-committee.

The Commissioners "heartily favor" an independent study of the fiscal relations between the municipal and Federal governments, Hazen said. His letter follows:

"On behalf of the people of the District of Columbia, and themselves, and the municipal service generally, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia extend to you and to the members of your subcommittee their heartfelt and grateful appreciation of your splendid achievement in obtaining an agreement to, and the passage of, the District of Columbia appropriation bill for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937.

"While the Commissioners regret the reduction in the Federal contribution they realize that the appropriation bill as enacted represents the best that could possibly be hoped for under the circumstances.

"The Commissioners heartily favor the proposal for an independent study to be made under the direction of the President for the purpose of establishing a fair and equitable amount to be contributed by the United States toward the expenses of the District of Columbia. The Commissioners express the sincere wish that the result of this study, as communicated to Congress by the President, will settle this question for many years to come justly to the United States and the District of Columbia."

The Camera Isn't Looking.

Hollywood, June 21.

These are glimpses of actors, writers, directors—people who make the pictures—taken while the camera isn't looking.

Gary Cooper is quiet on a set. He generally sits in a chair. Until the director calls him, he studies his lines in his dressing room, seldom on the set. He always carries his "shooting script" between a set of covers on which is printed his name. A pretty picture also has been added. The printing and painting were done by Cooper, who is a good artist.

Merle Oberon studies her lines in her dressing room, even going to the extent of reciting into a dictaphone and listening to the record. She is always dressed up for her roles. She takes direction willingly. She always becomes very friendly with the director.

Carole Lombard strives to create the impression of abandonment. She appears as if she doesn't care. Yet she does. She fights to get a scenario and a cameraman she likes. On the set she may not appear greatly concerned, but she is more of an actress than given credit for.

While making "Romeo and Juliet," Leslie Howard didn't seem to be as impressed with his Shakespearean role as many other performers. Romeo Howard wandered about the set with his candid camera, taking his own pictures. And he wore eye glasses. Romeo with glasses!

When writing a scenario, William Anthony McGuire, who wrote the flicker, "The Great Ziegfeld," always has a box of sharpened lead pencils in front of him. He writes with one pencil until the point starts to become dull and then discards it for a new pencil. He only writes in long-hand. Then he reads the copy to his secretary who types it.

Clifford Odets works at a typewriter. He prefers to work at night and in pajamas. He has a stack of notebooks in front of him in which he has scribbled notes. After a writing stretch of several hours, he will leave his typewriter for a while and play the piano.

Gene Fowler, when writing a scenario, will jot notes in pencil. Then he will dictate a scene to his secretary. Then from her typewritten copy of this scene, Fowler will sit at the typewriter and write the scene. Fowler always forgets the names of his characters and must have a list in front of him when working.

William Wyler, who is now directing "Dodsworth," started his film career by doing foreign publicity for Universal. He likes to eat on the set, and before directing a tender scene, he will eat a frankfurter.

Auto Licenses In Alexandria Show 1936 Gain

8,251 Tags Sold in City for $101,634; I. O. O. F. to Honor Lewis.

The sale of State automobile licenses in Alexandria shows an increase over last year, the latest report showing 816 more than for the corresponding period of 1935, according to the report of Claude W. Fletcher, distributor for Alexandria and vicinity.

The record shows 8,251 tags issued in 1936 as against 7,435 for 1935. The revenue from licenses amounted to $101,634.35, as against $89,646.45, or an increase of $11,987.90.

There were 7,229 licenses for passenger cars, 791 for trucks, 24 for trailers, 33 for motorcycles, 9 for passenger cars for hire, 146 for trucks for hire, and 19 for trailers for hire.

Philip Lewis, of Alexandria, who has been a member of the Odd Fellows for 52 years, will be presented with a jewel suitably inscribed for his long membership, on the night of June 26, in the room of Potomac Lodge of Alexandria. The jewel will be presented by Butler Lodge, of Butler, Pa., and a delegation of 75 members of that lodge will come to Alexandria for the presentation, among them being 20 members of the Glee Club of the Pennsylvania lodge.

On June 26, 1886, Mr. Lewis was made a member of the Butler lodge, and within the past few years he has made his home here with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Hudson.

A series of instructions in life saving will be started at the municiple swimming pool beginning this afternoon, under the auspices of the local Red Cross chapter. The lessons will be given each afternoon, from 2 to 6 o'clock.

The lessons include full and complete instructions in life saving, as prescribed by the American Red Cross, and will be under the direction of Life Guards Tom Ennis and Roy Jennier. Tests will be given applicants after they have received a minimum of 12 hours instruction, and those passing the tests will be given certificates, either junior or senior, as may be warranted.

Persons desiring to take the course of instruction should make application to Superintendent Harry Rudd at the pool not later than today.

Yankees Bow To Detroit, 8 to 7

Tigers Make It Two in Row in Seesaw Game of Many Hits.

Gehringer's Home Run Aids in Defeat of Champions.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 21.—The Detroit Tigers, coming back strong after a long losing streak, made it two in a row today by outlasting the league-leading Yankees today, 8 to 7, before 40,000 shivering fans, largest crowd of the season.

The Tigers, with a three-run rally in the fourth and another attack in the seventh which produced five, came from behind to overcome a six-run lead the visitors built up in the first three innings at the expense of Schoolboy Rowe, who started for Detroit. The schoolboy left the game in the third in favor of Roxie Lawson.

Red Ruffing, who started for the Yanks, succumbed to the cold wind in the fourth. Charley Gehringer slammed a homer to open the inning, and after Gee Walker had doubled and Simmons walked, Marvin Owen slapped a double between Di Maggio and Powell to score them both.

Riggs Is Victor In Clay Net Tourney

By the United Press.

River Forest, Ill., June 21.—Bobby Riggs, Los Angeles schoolboy, upset Frankie Parker, of Lawrenceville, N. J., today and won the national clay courts championship in straight sets.

Parker, who was seeded first in the absence of the champion, Bitsy Grant, was tied in knots by the black-haired Coast youngster. The score was 6—1, 6—4, 6—4.

Riggs added the doubles championship by teaming with Wayne Sabin, Hollywood, Calif., to defeat John McDiarmid, Chicago, and Gene McCauliffe, New York, 4—6, 6—2, 6—4, 7—5.

It was a a long step for the 18-year-old Los Angeles star, who won the national junior title just a year ago.

In every one of the 27 games of the match, Riggs outscored the former national clay courts champion 2 to 1. He committed 50 errors to 58 for Parker.

Riggs concentrated on Parker's new forehand, which appeared little stronger than the push shot the Jersey boy abandoned at the start of the year. When Parker advanced to the net, where he is more at home, Riggs passed him consistently.

The Coast youngster has the soundest repertoire of strokes of any young star in the game. His accuracy kept Parker on the run continually and his ability to keep the ball in play from almost impossible angles finally wrecked his opponent.

Red Sox Take First; Browns Win Finale

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 21.—The Red Sox and Browns split a double bill here today, Boston taking the opener, 3 to 0, behind the two-hit pitching of Wesley Ferrell, and St. Louis the second, 6 to 3, in face of a sudden seventh-inning explosion on the mound by Elon Hogsett that blew a comfortable lead in half.

Giants Defeat Cards, 6 to 4; Cut Lead

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 21.—The Giants sliced the St. Louis Cardinals' National League lead to a slim half-game today, winning their second straight over the gas-house gang by a 6-to-4 margin.

Travis Jackson's homer, with two aboard in the midst of a four-run rally in the third inning, proved to be the hit that downed the Cards, as Lefty Al Smith chalked up his seventh victory, although he had to be relieved by Freddy Fitzsimmons for the last three frames.

It's Long, Long Way ToBritishGolf Title

By the Associated Press.

Hoylake, England, June 21.—Gene Sarazan, back again in pursuit of the British Open golf championship, surveyed the long stretches of fairway and sighed:

"I wish now that I had that wheel chair that Walter Hagen so kindly offered me during the National Open at North Shore, Chicago, in 1933."

The fact that he's challenging for the British title on British ground doesn't bother the little Connecticut farmer, but the great distances to be walked during the next five days have him weary.

"This is the first tournament I have ever heard of where a fellow has to walk 30 miles to win," he sighed. "If the weather is as hot as this, that's a lot of miles and I don't feel any too strong."

Nats Leave for 3-Game Series With St. Louis

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, June 21.—Happy at least to be out of Cleveland after three straight lickings, the Nats entrained for St. Louis tonight. They open a four-game series with the last-place Browns tomorrow. Jimmy DeShong, the Nats' leading pitcher, with his eight victories and three defeats, will be opposed on the mound by Earl Caldwell, of the Browns.

Cubs' Streak Broken at Fifteen

Mungo Effective After Chicago Wins First by 7-2 Score.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, June 21.—The Chicago Cubs stretched their winning streak to 15 games in the opener of a double-header today, and then had it abruptly ended by Van Lingle Mungo and the rest of the lowly Brooklyn Dodgers in the nightcap.

By splitting the twin-bill, winning 7-2 and losing 6-4, the Cubs missed out on a chance to take first place in the National League, as the Cardinals were defeated. As a result, the Cubs stayed in second place, half a game back.

Curt Davis' five-hit pitching, along with a 12-hit barrage by his mates, clinched the opening game as early as the fourth frame, when the Cubs went out in front, 6-1. George Watkins hit a homer for the Dodgers in this contest.

They didn't subside without a fight in the nightcap, but 3-run Brooklyn sprees, both in the second and eighth was more than they could overcome against the eight-hit performance of Van Lingle Mungo, chalking up his seventh win in his second start since his recent one-man revolution.

Ted De Boer Takes 2d Sailboat Crown

Ted De Boer won his second sailboat championship in two years yesterday when the final race of the spring series of the Potomac River Sailing Association's sailboat races showed his boat, the Sandpiper, had run up a high-point score of 42⅝ in Class A.

R. Youngs sailed Peter Pan to first place in Class B with a total of 56¾ points. Ed Blount took first place in the moth class with a total of 21⅞ points, double that of his nearest competitor.

In the concluding race of the spring series yesterday, Verner Smythe's Sassy took first place in the comet class, while Breezy, skippered by A. Dudley, finished second, crossing the line 2½ minutes astern. Wildcat, skippered by C. Krey, was first in Class A, while Alvern, skippered by A. Greaver, was first in Class B. Ed Blount's Harriet was first, as usual, in the moth class.

Lady Avon captured first place in the Class A through the skillful skippering of Maj. H. H. Jacobs and the work of his crew, which included C. L. Howard, a star boat sailer from Peoria, Ill., and 10-year-old Sam Doyle. Peter Pan was first in Class B yesterday morning, and Blount sailed his Harriet to first place in the moth class.

3-Way Race Seen at Poughkeepsie

By the Associated Press.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 21.—Rowing history will be written again tomorrow when the varsity shells sweep down the Hudson in the annual Poughkeepsie regatta and the experts say it will be written by California, Cornell and Washington.

As the oarsmen rested for the big race, scheduled to start from Krum Elbow at 7 o'clock (Eastern standard time) tomorrow, the general agreement was that the regatta was a toss-up among smooth rowing California, the powerful Huskies from Washington and the surprising Red men from Cornell, who have been improving rapidly in their long, arduous workouts.

Columbia, Pennsylvania and Navy also displayed great improvement in their final drills but few expected them, along with Syracuse, to offer much opposition to the crews of the "big three."

Although Washington defeated California, winner of the big race three straight years, in their 3-mile battle last April, the Bears impressed onlookers as a smoother crew as they took their final spin over the river. The Huskies had just as much power as their Western rivals but didn't appear to have the unity and co-ordination of the Californians.

Cornell, in the midst of an athletic rennaissance, was all excited over the prospect of victory and an end of California's domination of the Hudson. The big Red crew appear to be as good or better as last year when it was beaten a fraction of a second by the victorious Bears.

Columbia, too, has improved rapidly since coming to the Hudson and so has Pennsylvania. Navy supporters also figured the Midshipmen had a chance as not always do the bigger and heavier crews win at Poughkeepsie.

The 2-mile freshman race and 3-mile junior varsity will precede the big event and they, too, are a question of take your pick. However, Washington is a heavy favorite to win both events as it did in 1935.

Cruickshanks 277 Wins 4th Va. Open

Record Total, 3 Under Par, Beats Out Harper and Nelson Long.

By the Associated Press.

Newport News, Va., June 21 (AP).—Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, won his fourth straight Virginia Open golf championship today with a record-smashing 277 for the 72 holes, three under par.

Even par through the fifty-fourth hole, he swept down the last lap in 34-33 for a 67, the best round of the tournament, to lead Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, and Nelson Long, of Hot Springs, by seven strokes. They tied for second with 284's.

Al Houghton, of Virginia Beach, and Jack Isaacs, pro at the Old Dominion Club here, scene of the two-day battle, split fourth and fifth place money with 285's.

Other pros in the money included Johnny Kelly, Ocean View, with a 291; Benny Loving, of Charlottesville with a 292, and Darrell Napier, Cruickshanks' assistant at the Country Club of Virginia, with 298.

Top Amateurs.

Frank Sutton, blond headed Richmond youth, topped the amateurs with a 292, tying Loving for seventh place. Morton McCarthy, of Virginia Beach, former mid-Atlantic titleholder, came in as the second low amateur with a 297 for ninth place, a stroke ahead of Napier.

Wee Bobby shattered all records for the State Open with his sizzling performance. His consecutive rounds of 68-70-72-67 lowered the previous low Open mark, which he chalked up on the James River course of the Country Club of Virginia in winning his first Virginia tournament in 1933, by eight strokes. The 277 was 12 under his winning 289 over the Old Dominion course in the Open here last year.

A much improved course partially accounted for the record-cracking performance, but Bobby was on his game. He might easily have had a 65 on his last round had putts dropped on the first and last holes. He three-putted No. 1 for a 5, one over par, and his putt for a birdie on the final hole stopped on the lip of the cup.

Guldahl Wins Western Open Crown With 274, 10 Under Par

By the United Press.

Davenport, Iowa, June 21.—Ralph Guldahl, towering St. Louis professional, came from far back in the field with a par-shattering 64 today and won the Western Open golf championship by three strokes.

The new champion, whose final 18 holes was one of the greatest competitive rounds in American golf, was 10 under par with his 274 for 72 holes. Ray Mangrum, of Dayton, Ohio, was second with 277 and Byron Nelson, Ridgewood, N. J., was third with 278.

Guldahl, previously famous for having missed a 4-foot putt which would have meant a tie with Johnny Goodman in the 1933 National Open at Chicago's North Shore Country Club, achieved his triumph, his first in major golf, all in one blistering round.

Yielding nothing to par on any hole of his afternoon installment of the final 36-hole assignment, and bringing down seven birdies, Guldahl, roared from fourth place to out-finish Mangrum. The Dayton professional, who had set the pace through the first three rounds, although he faltered on the third journey, had to settle for second place with a final total of 277, three strokes back.

Guldahl was an even 10 strokes under par for the four trips over the hilly course, and his total was only one stroke shy of matching the tournament record of 273 established by Tommy Armour, of Chicago, at Milwaukee, in 1929. His final round established a new competitive course record and equalled the informal mark set up by Gene Sarazen in an exhibition with Mildred (Babe) Didrickson last year.

Boston, June 21 (AP).—Wally Berger, Boston outfielder, blasted out a home run with one man on base in the ninth inning today and gave Boston a 3 to 2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. Boston took the series with the reds two out of three games. A crowd of 9,747 saw today's game.

The National City League packed more action into one Sunday yesterday than The Post Association has seen in many weeks. Shady Grove Barbecue and the Union Printers, tied for first place in Section A, grappled on the South Ellipse before some 2,000 fans, with the Barbecuers staggering through with a 7-6 victory.

The triumph threw Shady Grove into a tie for the Section A lead, with the Heurich Brewers, who were pounding out a 14-2 verdict over on the East Ellipse over Plaza Wine & Liquor before approximately 2,000 or more sandlot addicts.

Out on Riverdale Field, the Blue Flame Valets, champions of Washington Sunday baseball last year, were absorbing a 5-3 defeat at the hands of the Dixie Pigs in a game which rotund Tony Baruto, nonplaying Blue Flame manager, actualy had to play right field.

Nolan Motors Wins Flag.

In Section B, Nolan Motors clinched the championship of that division for the first half by trouncing Regal Clothing, formerly known as the Georgetown A. C., 17 to 5, at Fairlawn Field.

Old Manhattan Beer and District Grocers went into a tie for second place in the section as the Beermen toppled the Ross Jewelers, 5 to 2, and the Grocers took the National Novelty nine into camp, 12 to 8.

The Shady Grove-Printer battle gave the big crowd full measure of satisfaction. The Printers threw their veteran pitcher, George Mosedale, into action a trifle too late to change the outcome. After the Barbecuers had scored six runs in the second inning to take a 7-0 lead, Mosedale relieved ill-fated Lefty Bean with two men on base and retired the side.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Cleveland, June 21.

Even that element which insists on and makes an issue of Nordic supremacy in the prize ring must now be aware of an untoward consequence of the Max Schmeling-Joe Louis affair in Yankee Stadium the other evening. With the myth of Louis' invincibility exploded by Schmeling's right hand, it is now feared that the result has served to bring Max Baer back to big-time fighting.

POVICH.

In fact, signs point to it. Out on the Coast, where Baer is campaigning among the tankers, the Hollywood harlequin has already declared himself. Reminding everybody that he once knocked out Schmeling in eight rounds, Baer gleefully announces that he is returning East to await a match with either Schmeling or Braddock.

Baer may believe that his knockout of Schmeling three years ago entitles him to another shot at the German, or Braddock, but the 80,000 who saw the Livermore larruper take it on the lam against Joe Louis last fall have other ideas. Whenever Baer returns to the big time, it will be too soon, according to this latter school of thought which is still outraged by the miserable performance of Baer against the Negro.

In that engagement (it was not a fight) Baer was beaten before he entered the ring, despite his blatent boasts of what he would do to the Negro. If it was not fear that was written over his features as the gong sent 'em into action, then it was a pretty good imitation of fright. At his first contact with Louis' left hook Baer was in a panic. After the one time that his right hand crashed against Louis' jaw and failed to halt the Negro, Baer virtually resigned.

The way Baer finally took the count was no recommendation for his courage, either. Fighters down on one knee throughout the referee's count, unlike fighters prostrate and unconscious on the floor, have their choice of staying down or getting up. Baer did not choose to arise and that final picture of him at the final count must always be held against him.

Baer knocked out Schmeling, 'tis true, but this department will never understand how he did it. Schmeling, ahead on points at the time, was hit by a roundhouse right that Baer pulled up from backstage and was knocked stiff—a sucker for a sucker punch. Schmeling, on the smart side as a fighter, should never have been hit by that wallop, but I suppose a fellow is entitled to one lapse.

But there is no excuse for a guy who goes into the fight beaten. Louis' knockouts of Carnera and Levinsky not only earned him the profound respect of Baer, but apparently instilled in the Californian an unconquerable fear. Tales that drifted from Baer's dressing room after the fight disclose that the Californian actually was unsteady on his legs as he was summoned into the ring.

In striking contrast was Schmeling's behavior in the early rounds against Louis. The stolid German hewed to a carefully preconceived plan of battle. He was not afraid to swing his right at the first sign of an opening, but he could laugh when Louis missed with a left hook. And when the opportunity to claim a foul and get the business over with was offered to Schmeling, he kissed it off simply with a warning to Louis.

Schmeling could have been knocked out any time after the third round and still merited respect as the first of Louis' big-time opponents to make a battle out of it. But the German had more ambition than that. He wasn't concerned only with showing his courage. He had a well-defined idea he could beat the Negro and set about to prove that his point was well taken.

In Short.

The free and easy custom of bestowing the distinction of superman on immature fighters took a jolt in Louis' defeat . . . and Jack Johnson, who maintained throughout that Louis' defense was full of flaws, is now entitled to chuckle loudly . . . Johnson's allegations had been set down to his envy of Louis who was about to supplant him as the greatest fighter of his race . . . Louis' admirers still point out that even Jack Dempsey was knocked out once in his career before he attained the title . . . Now Louis' managers reveal that the Negro had taken the Schmeling bout too lightly . . . That he refused to follow the orders of his trainer . . . that he was so anxious to get the day's work over that he shortened the rest period between rounds with his sparring partners to a half-minute . . . and that he thought he knew all there was to learn about fighting . . . but they add that Louis is now a genuinely penitent young man, destined to become a greater fighter.

Wade Auto continued to set the pace in the Police Boys Club Midget League of the Post Sandlot Association yesterday by shutting out Michigan Park, 8 to 0, on the Monument Lot. It was the third win against no defeats for the league leaders.

Home Theater went into second place by winning its third victory in four games while the powerful Police Boys Club No. 5 nine was taking a 9-4 beating from Sanitary Grocery. Home Theater defeated No. 4 Police Boys Club, 8 to 4.

The police teams bowed in colorful uniforms at least. The No. 5 boys sported new gray suits and the No. 4 club, bright yellow uniforms with red, white and blue trims.

75 Golfers to Vie In Rock Creek Play

18-Hole Qualifying Rounds Scheduled Today.

As a tune-up for the National Public Links qualifying trials scheduled July 1-2, some 75 municipal golfers will compete today in the 18-hole qualifying round Rock Creek open championship.

Play will start at 9 o'clock. Ed Burns will accept post entries. Match play will be held tomorrow and Wednesday.

Levi Yoder, Middle Atlantic golf champion, who plays in the Maryland State Amateur Championship at Hillendale this week, served notice that he is on his game yesterday by drilling out a 32, four under par, on the back nine at Kenwood, his home course. Playing with Leo Cullinane, Yoder birdied the tenth, eleveneth, twelfth and thirteenth, using up only three putts on the first four holes.

Entries for the amateur close at 6 p. m. today with Emmet Gary, 16 McClellan place. The tournament opens Wednesday.

Burman Will Meet Tough Foe in Weimer at Stadium Tonight

Baltimorean Being Pushed To Top

Dempsey Believes 'Red' Likely Prospect; Weimer Is Tough Foe.

With Joe Louis disposed of and the heavyweight boxing field apparently wide open and devoid of "supermen," many fistic authorities are turning their attention to Clarence (Red) Burman, the Baltimore boy, who fights Dutch Weimer at Griffith Stadium tonight.

Now that the situation has cleared up with Schmeling having eliminated Louis from his dominance of the heavyweight circles, Dempsey and his associate, Max Waxman, have determined to plunge to the limit in an effort to elevate the redhead to the top as quickly as possible.

Already ranked ninth among the heavyweights, Burman has made remarkable strides since he fell into the hands of the talented Dempsey-Waxman combine. At the time he hooked up with the duo, Burman was not regarded as a prospect in any weight division—even the middleweight.

He was light, for one thing, and still able to scale in at the middleweight limit. A few months of inhaling juicy steaks at Dempsey's famed New York restaurant soon took care of the weight proposition. In other words, Burman was literally fed into the heavyweight division.

Style Is Changed.

At the time he came under the management of Jack and Max, Burman was employing a style of fighting entirely contrary to his natural mode of fist flipping. A born mauler and natural body puncher, he had been instructed by his former managers to adopt a stand-up fighting stance and to rely largely on left jabs for both offense and defense. That made him a practically terrible fighter.

Dempsey took him in hand and sent him back to his natural style of fighting which was very much like that of Jack himself when he was champion. He started Red bobbing, weaving and tearing in to the body and the change was so effective that Burman found no trouble knocking out Jackie Aldare, Tony Cello, and Buddy Knox and winning twice from Billy Ketchell, also Terry Mitchell, Hank Bath, and many others. He made a great hit in Chicago by stopping Knox who had won 19 consecutive bouts and three times whipped Joe Lipps.

Now under the skillful guidance of Dempsey, who handles the fighting end, and Waxman, a businessman par excellence, Burman seems destined to work his way solidly into the upper strata.

Weimer is not generally expected to prove a set-up for Burman. Three years ago, while only 20, the Dutchman won a nontitle contest from the then middleweight champion, Gorilla Jones. In 1934 he defeated Maxie Rosenbloom and a year ago conquered and all but stopped the then light heavyweight champion, Bob Olin.

Weimer also boasts wins over Babe Risko and Frank Rowsey and he knocked out Clyde Chastain.

Three six-round bouts and a four-round opener, yet to be announced, will round out the program of punch.

POST PREDICTIONS.

Bouts are rated from A (excellent) to C (like "experts" who pick Louis-Schmeling bouts for the papers).

MAIN EVENT—Clarence (Red) Burman, Baltimore, vs. Frankie (Dutch) Weimer, California, heavyweights; 10 rounds. Rated C. Weimer is a rough and tumble tussler, but he is not as rough and tumble as Burman. It is entirely possible that the Dempsey protege may stop Weimer, but only after he has been thoroughly extended.

SEMIFINAL—Joe Green, Washington, vs. Jackie Clark, Lancaster, Pa., featherweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. Green has improved greatly since his layoff and should win from Clark, who is no bum in his own right.

Ritchie Mack, Dalas, Tex., vs. Jack Duffy, Baltimore, welterweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. This should be the brawliest kind of brawl, with Duffy having his hands full taking care of the wily Texan. It's anybody's fight, so let's say Duffy.

Pete Galiano, Baltimore, vs. Joe Davis, Elizabeth, N. J., lightweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. Davis is reported to be a very good prospect, but he will have to be better than that to whip Galiano.

Nats Bow to Tribe, 8-3; Lose Ground son scored from third after Vosmik's fly. Meanwhile, Galehouse had been holding the Nats to four hits with the aid of a pair of double plays.

The Nats' chief bid for at least a tie took place in the sixth when, with one out, Stone singled to right and Kuhel drew a walk. But in this emergency, Bolton popped up. Kress finally drove in a run with a single to center and Bluege breathed new life into the uprising with a single that scored Kuhel, but Pinch Hitter Miles terminated the threat by grounding to Hughes on the first pitch.

Hughes personally made it 8-3 in the sixth when he drew a walk and progressed to third on a pair of outs. Then it was that he faked two dashes for home and cut loose in earnest on his third. He stole the run cleanly when Weaver continued his wind-up deep in the reflection of who knows what.

Sullen, Downcast, Joe Louis Returns Home; Will Take Rest

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 21.—Joe Louis came home today, downcast and almost sullen in sharp constrast to his customary nonchalance.

There was no crowd at the station to meet him—another contrast to his previous, triumphant returns.

The fallen Bomber, wearing blue spectacles to hide a damaged eye, pulled up his topcoat collar to conceal a swollen cheek and puffed lips, and ducked across the train shed to a taxicab, shunning photographers. In the taxicab, he hid his face with his straw hat.

His retinue separated in New York yesterday. Those who came to Detroit with Joe said he had "nothing to say."

Joe will recuperate from his beating at the summer home of Julian Black, one of his managers, near Stevensville, Mich. He will do light training to keep in condition.

Black said he believed the sound threshing at the hands of Max Schmeling would do Joe "a world of good." He and John Roxborough, another member of the Bomber's board of strategy, had disclosed that Joe developed a bad case of over confidence before the fight.

If arrangements can be made, Joe will fight again in August. His opponent has not been chosen.

Fort Myer Poloists Beat Md. Four, 10-9

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., June 21.—With Capt. D. H. Galloway leading the attack, the Third Cavalry polo team from Fort Myer defeated the Maryland Polo Club in an exciting game today at Stevenson, 10 to 9. Capt. Galloway scored five goals. The visiting team had the advantage of a two-goal handicap.

Maryland put up a valiant fight in the last chukker in an effort to tie the visitors.

Midway of the chukker Tuttle's pony crossed his legs and Martin was thrown to the ground. His pony ran away as the announcer called to attendants to close all gates. The pony, with Referee Joseph B. Reilly in pursuit, found a path leading to the main road in back of the club house, and Reilly gave up the chase.

Fight Pictures Show Louis May Have Been Beaten in 2d

By Bill McCormick.

Official motion pictures of the artistic razing job done by Max Schmeling on Joe Louis show that the doom of the Brown Bubble may have been sealed in the second round—not the fourth, as many believe.

The remarkably clear and complete flickers of the startling upset, now being shown at the State Theater in Bethesda, show that Joe was nailed by the first hard right to the head which found its mark early in the second—and call particular attention to an ensuing right to the head later in the round which made Louis hear bells when bells weren't ringing.

Louis seems to shake off the effects of the first blow, but there was so little time left in the round after the second that it is impossible to estimate its effect.

It was the Detroit darky's reaction to the second punch which first gave this writer any indication at the ringside that Schmeling had a chance. The blow, the same type of sizzling, looping wallop which finally was to batter Joe into the resin dust, caused Louis to fall momentarily into a clinch.

He pushed himself from the clinch, turned his back on Schmeling—and started to walk to his corner. Schmeling stood flabbergasted for a split second, then started after Louis. Referee Arthur Donovan held Max off and called Louis back into action.

At this juncture in the actual fight, the writer turned to a neighbor in the press box with a remark which, at the time seemed to express a forlorn possibility.

"It is possible we may be in a way to see the biggest upset ever in the ring," we remarked. "When a guy gets hit so hard he hears the bell ring when it didn't ring, he has been hurt. If Schmeling can do that a few more times, he may win."

Being no smarter than any of the so-called "boxing experts" who thought Max would be lucky if he lasted through the introductions, we had no real idea at the time that Schmeling was to turn the trick. Of course, after Louis was floored in the fourth round, there was very little doubt as to the eventual winner, even though Joe did rally to win the seventh round.

The pictures show also that Louis did not know how to take a count. In the fourth he jumped off the floor without taking advantage of the allowable nine seconds rest, which might have given him much-needed strength—and he arose with his arms down. This so puzzled Schmeling that he stood agog instead of rushing in to apply the finishing touches.

The pictures show even more clearly than the actual fight that Louis had not been properly schooled to take advantage of the many flaws in Schmeling's style, while Der Schlager was perfectly tutored in the proper manner to handle the saffron-skinned socker.

The Atlantic and Pacific League of the Post Association went more or less wild yesterday as Iona won a 25-18 melee from Bokar and Condor outslugged Encore, 14 to 10. Condor's victory was its fourth straight against no defeats and gave it a lead of a game and a half over the second place Encore and Iona clubs.

Five home runs were collected during the afternoon as 55 hits rattled to all sections of the fields. Bokar gathered 22 hits to Iona's 21 at West Potomac, but not quite enough to win. Hendrick, Bokar shortstop, got two homers, one in the third with none on and one in the fifth with none on.

Higgins of Iona connected for the circuit in the second. Iona's 13 runs in the first inning apparently were enough to clinch the ball game but Bokar rallied to bring the count at one point to 19-18, the closest the score became.

Second Baseman Vito of Condor starred with three hits in four times at the plate, including a home run with two on. Thomas of Encore also hit a homer as well as doing some effective relief pitching. The game was played on the South Ellipse.

Hecht Co. Wins, Takes Store Loop Lead

Kann's 9-8 Victory Over Palais Royal Helps to Turn Trick.

DEPARTMENT STORE LEAGUE.

	W.	L.	Pct.
Hecht Co.	6	2	.750
Palais Royal	3	3	.500
Kann's & Sons	3	4	.429
Lansburgh Bros.	3	4	.333

Because of a couple of story-book finishes, the Hecht Co. ball team is in first place in the Department Store League of the Post Sandlot Association instead of Palais Royal. Hecht took a 3-2 decision from Lansburgh's while Kann's was scoring 2 runs in the last half of the last inning to beat Palais Royal 9 to 8.

The Hechtmen had a 2-1 lead over Lansburgh's going into the ninth inning. Mitchell, Hecht pitcher, who had allowed but three hits up to this time, yielded a single to Cassidy, an intentional pass to Deck and another single to Lambert who pinch-hit for White and drove in the tying run.

Hecht's came back in the last half of the ninth, however, to take advantage of an error allowing Howard to take first. He stole second and along came Reds McMenamin at this juncture to slash a single to right field with two out to score the sprinting Howard with the winning run.

Ten walks issued by Hess, Palais Royal pitcher, contributed largely to the Kann victory in a wild-and-woolly ball game. Palais Royal had a 7-4 lead going into the fifth inning but the count was tied at 7-7 when Palais Royal came up for the seventh and last inning.

The Royals crowded over one run but Kann's retaliated in the final half of the frame to score the trying and winning runs.

Fairfax Police Officer Injured By Hit-Run Car

Capt. Heywood Durrer and Companion Hurt; Man and Wife Held.

Capt. Heywood J. Durrer, 260-pound member of the Fairfax County (Va.) police force, and Henry Ravamal, of 718 B street southeast, were injured early yesterday morning when struck by an alleged hit-and-run car near Falls Church, Va.

Durrer was taken to Alexandria Hospital where he was treated for a broken shoulder, broken collarbone and possible internal injuries. Ravamal was taken to Georgetown Hospital suffering from severe lacerations about the head.

Durrer was investigating a minor accident on Lee highway at Chimney Villa when he and Ravamal were struck by the car. Durrer was thrown 20 feet by the impact.

When the speeding auto failed to stop after the accident, witnesses gave chase, overtaking the vehicle in Falls Church.

There Herbert Knox, of Falls Church police, placed Mrs. Alma Byrne, alleged driver of the car, under arrest. Mrs. Byrne, who is from Arlington, Va., denied having been involved in the accident, police said. She later was released after posting $1,000 bond.

Her husband, Edward Byrne, a passenger in the car, also was arrested, charged with intoxication. He also was released on bond. The case will come up for hearing in the Fairfax County Trial Justice Court on June 29.

Trial of Williams Will Open Today

Richmond, Va., June 21 (AP).—Trial of Earl G. Williams, 24-year-old Negro, charged with the murder of Fannie Kurz and the wounding of her companion, George Milton Brown, on the night of May 20, 1934, in Battlefield Memorial Park, near Fredericksburg, will open in Federal District Court here tomorrow. The case is in Federal Court because the attack on the young white couple occurred on a Federal reservation.

The Government has called 70 witnesses, among them a number of Federal Bureau of Investigation agents. The defense has summoned 30 witnesses.

Judge Luther B. Way, of Norfolk, will preside.

Insurance Firm Will Move Today

The Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. will move today to its new home.

The new offices are located on Louisana avenue, facing the Capitol. William Montgomery, president of the company, made the announcement of the moving last night. He said:

"This building conforms in architectural style to the great Federal buildings adjoining. Six stories in height, the building includes every modern features for the expeditious handling of the company's business.

Attractive Dwelling Built by Matheny, Presented by Fisher Firm.

A Washington Post model home opened in Maryland yesterday for many home lovers and prospective buyers. It is located at 4509 Maple avenue, in Bethesda, and is presented by Thomas J. Fisher & Co., Inc., agent.

Built by C. R. Matheny, a veteran contractor, it is attractively furnished by Hutchison, Inc., and artistically draped by John F. Ligon. The exhibit dwelling is of colonial design, executed in red brick and white rim.

Other items of its construction and equipment include slate roof, rock wool insulation, furred walls, weatherstripping, caulking, screening, automatic heat and attached garage. It contains a living room, dining room, kitchen, two bedrooms, bath, ample closet space, full basement and attic.

Directing attention to five other new homes in its immediate vicinity, it will be open today and daily until further notice. The newest model home of this publication may be reached by going out Wisconsin avenue past the Bank of Bethesda to Maple avenue and right on Maple avenue to the property.

Brown, Officer Of LehighFirm, Dead in Jersey

Son of Former 6th Corps Area Commander Only 30 at His Death.

Word was received here last night of the death in Lakewood, N. J., of Dorrance Brown, official of the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co., and only son of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Preston Brown.

Brown, 30, died in a Lakewood hospital where he was taken June 17 for treatment of spinal injuries, suffered June 17 on a fishing trip with friends.

Brown lived with his wife, the former Jane Evans, daughter of a naval officer, at St. Davids, near Philadelphia, Pa. They had no children.

Brown's father was formerly commander of the Sixth Corps Area. He was retired in 1934.

Born in Atlanta.

Brown was born June 21, 1905, at Atlanta, Ga., where his father was stationed. His mother was the former Susan Ford Dorrance, of Dorranceton, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. He was descended on his father's side from William Hancock, one of the incorporators of the Colony of Virginia; on his mother's side from Col. George Dorrance, who was killed in action at the Wyoming Valley massacre in Pennsylvania, while commanding the Colonial forces against the British in 1778.

Brown also was descended from John Brown, a former United States Senator from Kentucky, and from Col. William Preston, one of the founders of Washington and Lee University.

Brown was educated at St. George's School at Newport, R. I., and at Yale University. Before joining the Lehigh Coal & Navigation organization, he served as assistant to the president of the Electric Bond & Share property in Panama. He was a first lieutenant in the Officers Reserve Corps and a member of the Aztec Club.

Brown's father, Maj. Gen. Brown, served in the World War as chief of staff of the Second Division, commander of the Third Division and assistant chief of staff of the American Expeditionary Forces.

Funeral services will be held at St. David's Episcopal Church near Wayne, Pa. Interment will be at Cave Hill Cemetery, Louisville, Ky.

Last Rites Today For G. J. Helwig

Funeral services will be held at Taltavull's chapel, 436 Seventh street southwest, at 2 p. m. today for George J. Helwig, 70, who died Friday at George Washington Hospital. Burial will be in Prospect Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Helwig had been a blacksmith in Southwest Washington for almost half a century. Born in Germany, he came to this country when a boy, learned his trade in Baltimore and then settled here.

For 25 years he operated three blacksmith shops in the Southwest district, shoeing all the Government and District-owned horses in that section. The Police and Fire Departments were among his customers.

Until his retirement about 10 years ago he was active in civic affairs of his neighborhood. He lived at 717 F street southwest.

Surviving are three sons, Leonard, Charles and Fred Helwig, all of Washington; a sister, Mrs. Annie Lutz, of Baltimore, and eight grandchildren.

E. J. McGolrick, 72, Dies at Home Here

Eugene Joseph McGolrick, 72, prominent Washington plumbing contractor, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 1432 Clifton street northwest, after an illness of several months.

Mr. McGolrick, who came to Washington from Baltimore with his parents more than 60 years ago, was in business with his son, Joseph Eugene.

He was a member of St. Paul's Catholic Church.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Laura H. McGolrick; one son, Joseph, and two daughters, Mrs. Katie Hipkins and Mrs. Treasa Keys both of this city.

Funeral services will be held at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday at the home. Mass will follow at St. Joseph's and burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Woodward School Will Open Today

Swimming during recess will break up the routine of the summer session of the Woodward School for Boys, conducted by the Y. M. C. A.

According to the headmaster, James J. King, the school will open today at 8:45 a. m. in the Central Y. M. C. A. building and between classes both students and faculty will take a dip in the pool.

On July 6 Woodward will open an out-of-doors school at Camp Letts, the Y. M. C. A. retreat for boys, near Annapolis. In favorbale weather the classes will meet in a grove of oaks overlooking the Rhode River. On rainy days a cottage at the edge of the grove will serve as schoolroom.

Students attending the Woodward school may make up back work or deficiencies in their regular school work. An entire year's credit in any subject may be obtained through the summer session, King has announced.

Department Stores Will Close Saturdays

Washington department stores and many specialty shops will close all day Saturday through July and August, it was announced yesterday by Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchant's and Manufacturers Association.

The following stores have advised the association that they will adhere to the new schedule:

Brewood M. Brooks & Co., Erlebacher, Inc.; Foster's Remembrance Shop, L. Frank Co., Galt & Bro., Goldenberg's, Goldheim's, Joseph R. Harris Co., the Hecht Co., Frank R. Jeleff, Inc.; S. Financial and Business Review

Demand Lifts Steel Output To Year's Peak

Rising Backlog Expands Mill Activity to 70½ Per Cent.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 21.—With rising backlogs promising to keep steelmakers busy at a high rate well into July, some producers are unwilling to take more tonnage at current prices, while others indicate they will accept orders right up to July 1, says Steel.

Under strong demand the national steelworks operating rate increased 2½ points, to 70½ per cent, last week, equaling the highest mark of this year, which was reached in the week of April 18.

Leading producers are four to six weeks behind in deliveries, some are having difficulty obtaining sufficient semifinished steel, and practically all are noting strong pressure for shipments, especially sheets. One leading interest, in order to make the July 1 price increase of $2 a ton fully effective, announced it would accept no more orders in sheets after June 20. Others have set June 25 as the deadline.

Tin Plate at 100 Per Cent.

Operations in tin plate were at a full 100 per cent of capacity for the sixth consecutive week and some observers held the opinion that production for the first six months of this year would be at least 15 per cent ahead of the same period in 1935. A few expected operations to be maintained at a high rate well into September.

The automobile industry showed a slight gain in operations over the previous week, 100,733 units being assembled, compared to 100,415. With the veterans' bonus expected to result in the sale of 200,000 to 250,000 new cars, some producers were considering building up stocks as a precaution against interrupted deliveries during change-overs. Automotive experts inclined to the belief that the summer dip for getting the stage set for 1937 models might fall more in August than in July.

Shape awards for the week total 28,370 tons, about 10,000 tons more than in the previous week. Pending awards, too, are heavy, including 40,000 tons for locks and dams in the upper Mississippi and Illinois rivers, and 10,000 tons for a bridge at Port Arthur, Tex. Requirements of a large plate tonnage are in prospect for construction of a steel floating dock to be shipped to Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

Railroad equipment markets are comparatively quiet, but more than 4,000 freight cars are on active inquiry. One road is about to take bids on 20,000 tons of rails.

Favorable Trade News Supports Prices While Market Awaits Effects of Bonus.

New York, June 21.—Unusual financial events marked last week, but the effect on markets was to push prices forward only slightly in slow trading.

The Republican convention the week before having been weathered without making much change in the situation, and expecting nothing new to come from the Democratic perfunctory gathering next week, at which New Deal principles will be re-affirmed, the markets looked with interest on the slow strangulation of the gold standard in France and the huge financial transactions on this side incident to the second quarter income tax collections, the issue of more than two billions of new Treasury obligations, the payment of dividends by corporations, the default on debt installments by foreign nations, and the distribution and encashment in part of more than two billions in soldiers' bonus bonds and checks.

So far the evidence is inconclusive on the effect of the bonus payments. It is not clear just what has been expected. Even in Administration circles the bonus has been looked upon as a two-sided creature—as a burden on Government credit, on the one hand, and as a possible stimulus to business on the other. In fact, the President first advised recipients of the bonus to hold their bonds, and later asked the banks in turn to do what they could to promote prompt cashing of the bonds so that trade might feel the quickening flow of money.

Bonus Effect.

No great rush to turn the bonds into cash has taken place, and reports indicate only a mild uplift in trade has been felt from the cash distributed. Experience with the billion-dollar bonus of a few years ago has shown the country that a great deal of money can be paid out with no more than a temporary and spotty effect on even the consumption trades, and, therefore, too much has not been anticipated from the current distribution. Moreover, in addition to the large percentage that naturally would go to debt retirement, most of the former service men are now in no great need of ready cash for quick spending, and a great many of them are far less inclined to wastefulness than might have been the case a few years ago.

So far as business is concerned the bonus is coming at a time when it is not needed. We have long since passed the stage when a can of water poured down the pump might have performed a useful priming function. Consumption industries are back to normal, as all but the durable industries in fact are. No less an authority than the Federal Reserve Board, in its monthly bulletin issued this week, observed that in the last six months industrial production had been nearly "up to normal." It is reasonable to suppose that enough of the bonus money will go into the markets to help offset the usual summer slackness, but no boom is in prospect. That seems to be as far away as a balanced budget under the New Dealers.

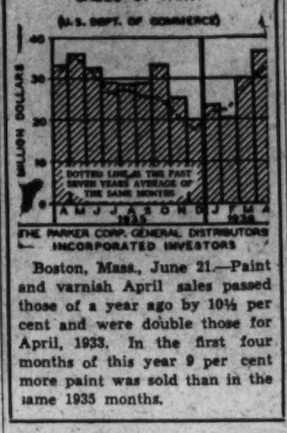
Good Trade News.

Where the unemployment still is heavy is in the farming areas. The effect of that condition on purchasing power is nevertheless not fully felt, because of the heavy doles given, mainly to reduce production and perpetuate as a consequence the high unemployment. For the rest, the lack of prosperity is most in evidence among heavy industries. Clouds are lifting a bit for the railroads, with a rise in traffic and a disposition on the part of Government to put competitors under control. For the public utilities the horizon still hangs low. Until threats of Government competition and legislation designed to throttle the industry are disposed of, one rich source of recovery for the capital goods industries will remain closed.

Trade news of the week continued to support markets. Railroad traffic, production of electric power, the steel industry's operating rate, all increased. Withdrawal of funds from France went on at a great pace as the nation moves toward abandonment of gold and devaluation of the franc, but those possibilities are no longer exciting our markets. Rather this side expects a long period to elapse before repatriation of French funds, nor does it anticipate a fresh outbreak of international currency depreciation.

Cash payments for the new Treasury bond offers and the provision for payment of the soldiers' bonus brought a heavy drop in excess bank reserves last week—$910,000,000—but the total remains above two billion and no tightening effect on money rates is possible. Monetary gold stock rose $63,000,000 and circulation sprang up $111,000,000, against only $5,000,000 a year ago. More than likely the circulation tide will recede without starting any inflationary movement in prices, although numerous commodities have been moving forward lately, notably in cotton and other farm products groups.

Paint Sales Double Volume 3 Years Ago



Boston, Mass., June 21.—Paint and varnish April sales passed those of a year ago by 10½ per cent and were double those for April, 1933. In the first four months of this year 9 per cent more paint was sold than in the same 1935 months.

Industry Index Touches Peak For Six Years

General Average and Power Output at New 1936 Highs.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 21.—The march of industry toward normal activity pushed into higher ground this week, reaching heights that were evacuated in the summer of 1930 and have remained untouched since that time.

The Associated Press index of industrial activity today was 90.9 of the 1929-30 average compared with 90.3 last week and 73.6 in the same period a year ago.

Electric power output for the week was the second largest ever reported, surpassed only by last December's record peak. Seasonally adjusted, the index was at a new top. Contributing largely to this gain is the high operating rate of steel mills, currently humming with activity to fill huge orders occasioned by the July 1 price increase posted for finished steel.

Automobile production, improved contra-seasonally, has been hovering around the 100,000-car mark for three weeks in a normally declining period. Cotton manufacturing moved up a notch, mills reporting good wholesale and retail demand.

Total carloadings dropped more than seasonally, although coal loadings were able to chalk up an advance.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted indices, based on the latest available statistics and with 1929-30 as 100, follows:

	Latest Week	Year Ago
*Composite index	90.9	73.6
Automobile production	93.4	84.0
Steel mill activity	93.9	51.4
Cotton Mfg. activity	105.6	81.5

R. E. Harris Heads Safe-Deposit Group

John F. Hillyard, chairman of the safe deposit section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, has appointed Richard E. Harris, assistant treasurer of the American Security & Trust Co., to be chairman of the general convention committee, which will have charge of arrangements for the National Safe Deposit Convention to be held in Washington next spring.

It is expected that over 300 delegates will attend the convention from all parts of the country.

Security Storage Co. Votes $1.25 Dividend

Directors of the Security Storage Co. have declared the quarterly dividend of $1.25 per share on the capital stock of the company.

The dividend is payable July 10 to stockholders of record July 6.

Farm Cash Income Rises 15.3 Per Cent

New York, June 21.—For the first four months, farm cash income from marketings amounted to $2,017,000,000 this year as against $1,749,000,000 last year, an increase of 15.3 per cent. The price level during the first four months was 2.3 per cent lower than a year ago, but the quantity marketed showed an increase of 18.1 per cent, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

Government benefit payments to the farmers during the first four months were much smaller than a year ago, totaling only $62,000,000 this year as against $221,000,000 last year. This decrease offset a good part of the gain in receipts from the sale of farm products. For the first four months, total farm cash income amounted to $2,079,000,000 this year as against $1,970,000,000 last year, an increase of only 5.5 per cent. Due to lower prices for the goods which the farmers bought, however, the farmers' purchasing power during the first four months was 10.1 per cent larger than a year ago.

Seversky Aircraft Files Stock Issue

The Seversky Aircraft Corporation of Farmingdale, Long Island, has filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission a registration statement in connection with a public offering of its stock which will net the company in excess of $3,000,000. Part of this anticipated business was secured last week in an award from the War Department for 85 pursuit airplanes at a total price of $1,636,250.

The registration statement covers a total of 840,000 shares of common stock of $1 par value, 280,000 shares of which are now outstanding. J. A. Sisto & Co. are the underwriters and have an option on the balance of 560,000 shares at prices ranging from $3 to $9 per share.

Cotton Seat Up $250.

New York, June 21.—The membership of the estate of George de Gumoens in the New York Cotton Exchange was sold yesterday to Samuel T. Hubbard, jr., for another for $11,750, this price being $250 in advance of the previous sale.

Fleming a Guest At Bank School

New Brunswick, N. J., June 21.—Four hundred bank officials from 233 towns and cities in 40 States and Puerto Rico will plunge into college classwork here tomorrow at the opening session of the 1936 Graduate School of Banking conducted under the joint auspices of Rutgers University and the American Bankers Association.

The formal opening will be held tomorrow night when the entire student body will be brought together by Dr. Harold Stonier, educational director of the American Bankers Association, who is director of the school.

Guests at the opening session will include Robert V. Fleming, president of the American Bankers Association; Robert C. Clothier, president of Rutgers University, and Lewis E. Pierson, chairman of the board of the Irving Trust Co., New York, who is chairman of the board of regents of the Graduate School.

On the Air Today

This week finds politics again king of the air. However, from the general appearances of the advence material released by the networks it would seem that most of the Democratic convention and special broadcasts attendant thereto have been scheduled on pretty definite assurances that they will be presented at advertised times.

Of course the Washington stations cannot offer their listeners every broadcast scheduled. Previous commitments force some of the political chatter off the local program calendars.

However, you can rely on the programs from and about the convention as shown on the timetable, on this page each day, with more confidence than was true with the Republican convention. There are simply less unforeseen circumstances this week to make changes at a late hour necessary.

You may be interested in knowing that: Arthur Godfrey will be master-of-ceremonies at the Democratic rally at Griffith Stadium this week. After several years of meeting the public in one way or another, Arthur undoubtedly will perform before his record crowd, by far.

Louise Massey and the Westerners have received a program of their own, beginning late in September. It will be called "Dude Ranch." Assitting will be John Milton, character actor, who will spin tall yarns as a cowhand employed on Miss Massey's ranch. Lanny Ross was starred in a preceding show under same auspices, and Conrad Thibault and Frank Crumit had the star roles last season.

"Hammerstein Music Hall" moves back to CBS, beginning June 30, with Ted Hammerstein, Lucy Laughlin and guest stars.

"The O'Neills" has been renewed for NBC presentation for a full year period, beginning June 29.

Highlights today:

Herbert Marshall: And Merle Oberon, starring in "The Dark Angel" in the "Radio Theater," WJSV, at 8. A drama of the war.

"Dark Eyes": Featured by Margaret Speaks, WRC, at 7:30. Also: "A Waltz Was Born in Vienna," "Nightingale and the Rose."

John Hamilton: On aims of the Republican Party, WRC, at 8:30. Speaking from rally in New York.

J. Edgar Hoover: Federal Bureau of Investigation chief discusses "part of youth in law enforcement" from youth congress, WMAL, at 6:15.

Elmo Tanner: Who whistles with Ted Weems and orchestra as the theme is played, is featured in "This'll Make You Whistle," in "Fibber McGee and Molly," WMAL, at 7.

Despite the fact that this will smack of treason and heresy to Edwin C. Hill's great following, I repeat what I said following the first fight broadcast which found Mr. Hill teamed with Clem McCarthy. To-wit: Mr. Hill is on the wrong beat behind a prize ring microphone. Ed Hill is held, more than any other news commentator and observer, as one of the best on the air. At least that is based on comments I hear from listeners. Why, then, draw him out of his field of superiority and place him in a spot where he halts, stutters and fumbles most dismally to his discredit? At best it is an interesting paradox with the fight sponsor buying a "name," at a large sum, needless to say, and the "name" merely taking a licking at the hands of his public. Neither gains. J. H. H.

Cumberland, Ridgeley To Discus Flood Control

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., June 21.—Representatives of Cumberland, Md., and Ridgeley, W. Va., will attend a flood-control discussion conference tomorrow in Washington at the request of Army engineers. They will advise that both municipalities are ready to go ahead with the entire project for this section.

Mayor Paul L. Morgan, Recorder W. Merle Cornelius and J. T. Vandegrift will represent Ridgeley, and City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer and City Attorney Charles Z. Heskett, Cumberland.

Congress has approved a project of $743,000, but has provided that the city, county and State must furnish $143,000 for costs of land damages in Ridgeley for a 400-foot channel for the Potomac River under the proposed flood-control plan. These damages will be taken from the $500,000 flood-bond issue authorized by the Maryland Legislature for Cumberland.

Dr. Halbert Quits As D. C. Relief Aid

Retirement of Dr. Leroy A. Halbert from the staff of the District public relief organization was disclosed in a report made public yesterday by Elwood Street, director of public welfare.

Dr. Halbert had been director of research of the public assistance division since June, 1934. He was the first chief of the public relief organization, having been appointed director on July 14, 1932. He was later superseded by Miss M. Alice Hill, present head. His retirement became effective June 15 and was dictated by need to reduce personnel because of limited administrative funds, Street said. Dr. Halbert's salary was $4,000 a year. He had been Rhode Island State director of relief work for 18 months prior to coming to Washington. Before that he had been in Kansas City for 25 years.

"Dr. Halbert," Street said in his announcement, "has been faithful, loyal and devoted in his services. As director of research he has produced a number of important surveys and studies."

Halbert said he intended to devote his time to furthering the cooperative movement in the National Capital, working with the Washington Consumers Club. Miss Hazel Spicer, who had been his assistant, has been named head of the statistical division.

Sojourners Parley Here to Draw 500

Five hundred members of the Baptist Sojourners, Masonic officers of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, the Coast Guard and the Coast and Geodetic Survey, will meet here next Thursday for a three-day convention.

High ranking officers in the United States service from all sections of the country, Puerto Rico, Alaska, Panama, Hawaii, Canada, Guantanamo Bay and representatives of ships at sea will attend.

Maj. Edwin S. Bettleheim, jr., chairman of the Washington committee on arrangements, said yesterday the program will include a motor caravan to Mount Vernon to lay a wreath on the tomb of George Washington, a parade and review at Quantico, and a marine supper in the marine barracks.

The annual election and initiation of the National Camp, Heroes of '76, will be the highlight of the first day's meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

Arlington County Home on Display

Large numbers of persons continue to visit the Virginia Washington Post model home at 2307 North Nottingham street, in nearby Arlington County. This display residence will be open daily and Sundays until 9 p. m.

Built by the Gardiner Construction Co., it is presented by A. S. Gardiner and furnished by P. J. Nee Co. It may be seen by driving out Lee Highway to the 5900 block, just past the Robert E. Lee School and to the sign directing the way to the property.

The display dwelling is a brick bungalow, quality built throughout, containing large rooms and attractive tile bath with shower. The second floor is sufficiently large for two additional rooms and bath.

The house has a cellar; is screened, weatherstripped and equipped with copper flashings and spouting. The structure is located on a large landscaped lot and has a garage.

Show Boat Operating

Fredericksburg, Va., June 21.—The Floating Theater has entered the mouth of the Rappahannock River and is again wending its way up the muddy stream, stopping off at various river towns for engagements of a week. Tomorrow it opens at Urbanna.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Betty Read.

The employe with the longest continuous service record in the Department of State is that expert treaty drafter, Sydney Yost Smith, who on July 1 will celebrate his fifty-fifth anniversary with the department.

Although Smith was eligible for retirement several years ago—he will be 79 years old in the fall—he is considered so valuable to the department that his services have been retained through executive orders at the special request of the secretary.

It's a hard job to find anyone to replace a man who for years has drafted the treaties—trade, peace and all sorts of others—and, in fact, is such a difficult task that there seems to be no one to take his place. Hence the extension of the retirement which State Department officials say they hope will be indefinite.

Worked at Forty-third Congress.

Only one other man approaches Smith's service record in the department and he is William McNeir, chief of the Bureau of Accounts, who entered the department a month before Smith but whose record was interrupted by a leave of absence for a year and a half.

As the Seventy-fourth Congress ended its session, Smith recalled that he started to work as a stenographer with the Forty-third Congress.

Smith, a native of Washington, entered the State Department in 1881 and on his second day had one of the most exciting experiences of his long career.

I have always been attached to the office of the Secretary or his assistant and on that day I was in the office where the only telephone in the whole department was," he said.

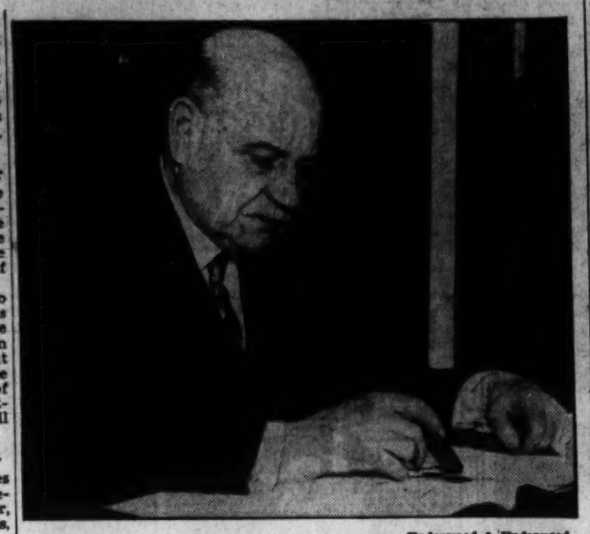
"Telephones were new and I was a little uncertain how to answer it when it rang. I listened and couldn't believe my ears. I was being told that President Garfield had been shot. I called the chief clerk to verify what I thought must be some awful misunderstanding coming over this weird new invention."

"It was the most unique experience I ever had and one I shall always remember with a chill."

Corrects Himself.

The treaty expert, who has spent his life dealing with the exact meaning of words, turned with a smile and remarked," I am wrong. There is no such thing as a most unique experience—only an unique one."

The first State Department Secretary Smith served under was James G. Blaine, then in his first administration.



Underwood & Underwood.

SIDNEY YOST SMITH.

In those days, Smith said, "we really had a spoils system" and he recounts with great pleasure the fact that he got two Governmnt jobs within a year without endorsement or influence. When he went to the State Department there were less than 100 employes there. Today they number nearly 1,000.

There are many high spots in his career but one which is mentioned everywhere in State Department was his trip with President Wilson to Paris as treaty drafting expert with the American Commission to Negotiate Peace. It is his handiwork which stands today as the evidence of America's participation in the post war dealings.

In 1897 he was made chief of the now-defunct Diplomatic Bureau, a post he held for 20 years. In 1910 he acted as disbursing officer and drafting expert of the American delegation to the Fourth International Conference of American States at Buenos Aires and today it is unusual if the treaties do not pass through his hands. Recently he has been occupied with trade agreements.

The energetic employes of the Department of Agriculture have a new idea they are just putting into operation. For some time past the athletic and recreational association has run in its official publication, issued every two weeks, a list of the Agricultural employes who either wish to go certain places in the country and are offering to share expenses of such a motor trip or those who have already planned a trip and wish someone to share the driving responsibility and the gas bill.

That has worked out so well and has proved such a popular way of getting to vacation points or to see friends and families that the association is now sponsoring train and bus trips at special rates to various parts of the country. On July 3, there will be such a trip to New York and later other cities in the country will be visited. This gives the employes an inexpensive way of seeing the country.

The manager of the Fourth U. S. Civil Service District announces applications will be received not later than July 16 for the position of aircraft sheet metal worker.

Vacancies in the Naval Air Station, Naval Operating Base, Norfolk, Va., in the position of metalsmith, aviation, at compensation ranging from $0.93 to $1.05 an hour for a 40-hour week, and a vacancy in the position of senior aircraft sheet metal worker at Langley Field, Hampton, Va., at $2,000 a year, will be filled from this examination. The compensation is subject to a deduction of 3½ per cent toward a retirement annuity.

Applicants must have had not less than 4 years' progressive training and or experience, which may include apprenticeship, as a sheet metal worker in a first-class shop; not less than 3 years of this experience must have been in aircraft sheet metal work.

Culbertson on Bridge

Rebids by No-Trump Bidder.

When you have opened the bidding with one no-trump, and your partner has responded with a bid of two in a suit, his hand is weak, likely containing ...o more than one honor trick. Despite his announced weakness, however, there still is a chance for game if you yourself have at least four plus honor tricks with strength in partner's suit (at least A x x or K J x) and the other three suits well protected. In such cases, you should bid two no-trump over his suit bid of two.

You should raise your partner's suit bid if you hold A K x or Q x of that suit, for now even a long weak suit such as K x x x x x or Q x x x x x may be run off at no-trump, to which partner will return if his holding is as described. Otherwise he will pass to your raise (on a weak hand) or bid game in his suit (if his two-bid was based on maximum values and unbalanced distribution).

Cross-Ruff Technique.

As I often have pointed out, proper handling of a cross-ruff plan involves the timing of each play. Today's hand is a good example.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	1 heart	Pass
1 spade	Pass	3 dimds.	Pass
4 no trp.	Pass	5 no trp.	Pass
6 dimds. (final bid).

West opened the ten of clubs, declarer took the finesse and lost to East's king. A low heart was returned and declarer won with the ace. Next he led a low heart for a ruff and was shocked to see West discard a spade. To prevent any further discarding of spades, the ace and king were cashed immediately. The ace and queen of clubs followed, declarer following to the first and discarding a heart on the second. Now came a vital decision! Declarer had to return to his hand with a ruff and it was imperative that he should choose the suit to lead from dummy that West would have to follow.

West's first spade discard was the clue! Naturally, he would have chosen further to shorten the suit that was the shorter to start with. Since he must have had either four spades or four clubs originally, it was extremely likely that he now was void in spades and had one club left. On this sound reasoning, the three of clubs was led from dummy. East failed to follow (proving the play to be correct) and, since this marked West with another club, declarer was able to ruff in safety with the diamond four. From there on it was a "romp." Hearts were disposed of by over-ruffing West's forced ruffs, and declarer returned to his own hand by ruffing spades with the ace and king of trumps. Thus the contract was made despite the fact that West had more trumps than either declarer or dummy.

Hundreds Visiting Post Model Home

Hundreds are visiting The Washington Post model home now featuring Burnt Mills Hills, development of the R. E. Latimer Co., of which Maj. Phil D. Poston is sales director.

This residential operation is on the Colesville pike, 3 miles beyond Silver Spring, Md. The model home and the development may be seen by driving out to the traffic light at Silver Spring, then 3 miles out the Colesville road to the property.

The display structure, furnished by Hutchison, Inc., and draped by John F. Ligon, has for its site an acre and a half of ground in a residential project comprising 125 acres of natural rolling countryside divided into home locations of from 1 to 5 acres.

The Post model home has a large front porch, living room, with fireplace and paneled walls; dining room with fireplace, electric kitchen, first-floor library and bath, three bedrooms, two baths, recreation room with fireplace, maid's room and bath, and built-in, two-car garage.

VICTOR HUGO'S IN LOS ANGELES. The world of fashion and of Hollywood calls Victor Hugo's charming, palm-studded Garden Room "Paris in Los Angeles"! And, as the diners pause between courses to enjoy their Camels, Hugo himself nods approval and says: "Our guests know fine tobacco as well as fine food. They have made Camels the outstanding favorite here."

ON THE RYDER CUP TEAM. Henry Picard (right) is rated the best golfer at full iron shots. Like so many champions, Picard smokes Camels. "Camels set you right!" he says. "Camels aid my digestion and never get on my nerves."

"YOU KNOW WHAT nervousness and eating fast can do to digestion," says Claire Huntington, busy public stenographer. "I find that smoking Camels at mealtimes makes food taste ever so much better and helps digestion. And a Camel gives me a 'lift.'"

During and after meals, Camels bring a sense of well-being and good feeling. That's why people say:

"—for Digestion's sake... smoke Camels"

Camels stimulate digestion in a pleasant, natural way ...increase alkalinity

The human digestion responds unfavorably to nervousness and strain. It is definitely encouraged by smoking Camels.

Scientific studies show clearly the manner in which Camels aid digestion. Using sensitive scientific apparatus, it is possible to measure accurately the increase in digestive fluids—alkaline digestive fluids—that follows the enjoyment of Camel's costlier tobaccos. This has now been done repeatedly. The same studies demonstrate that an abundant flow of digestive fluids is important also to the enjoyment of food.

Make Camel your cigarette for steady smoking. They never tire your taste. For a welcome sense of well-being, for a cheery "lift," and for digestion's sake, enjoy Camels. They never get on your nerves. They are gentle on your throat. You'll like the firmness of Camels too—no loose shreds annoy you.

GOLD-CUP WINNER! George Reis wound up his speed-boat, El Lagarto, to over 65 miles an hour to win the Gold Cup Trophy for the third straight time! "I'm a Camel smoker," says this outstanding speed-boat driver. "I eat heartily, smoke Camels, and enjoy that feeling of well-being that goes with good digestion."

MRS. WILLIAM I. HOLLINGSWORTH, JR., popular Californian, well-known in the social life of New York and London. "How natural it is to smoke Camels when dining," says Mrs. Hollingsworth. "They are so mild. Camels please my taste and aid digestion."

COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.
